Burial vault strike leaves grief undone

Herald report

John Lampinen

It is difficult, just yet, for Otto H. Fiene of Des Plaines to begin picking up the pieces.

That is one of the acknowledged functions of a funeral: to grieve, to accept and to go on.

For Fiene, however, the funeral for his 69-year-old wife, Helen, more than two weeks ago has not been able to do that fully. There is something missing. There is a nagging feeling of something left undone.

HE IS ONE of the victims of the 31-day-old burial vault workers' strike.

The lack of cemetery vaults caused by the strike has delayed a number of burials in the Northwest suburbs. Mrs. Fiene's burial has been one of them.

For 17 days, her body has been stored at Oehler Funeral Home in Des Plaines.

"It bothers you," Fiene observed Thursday. "It bothers everybody, yeah, but what can you do? It's one of those things you can't do anything about."

His voice was soft. It was a difficult subject to discuss, and Fiene asked his son-in-law, Elmer Oehlerking of Palatine, to continue for him.

"THIS IS harder for the family," Oehlerking said. "It's bothering my father-in-law, this delay, because it isn't complete."

Mrs. Fiene died June 20 at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Rige. They had been married for 17 years, and they were very close. In fact, Oehlerking said, the whole family was close.

She had been ill for the last five years, but it wasn't until recently that the situation grew serious. Two weeks before her death, she suffered a stroke. And then came the fatal heart attack.

The funeral was June 22 at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church in Des Plaines. Plans were made to bury her at Ridgewood Cemetery.

However, no burial vaults, sealed boxes used to enclose the caskets, were available because of the strike, and her remains were returned to the funeral home.

FIENE DID not consider cremation or the use of cement liners, which are similar to the vaults but are not sealed and therefore do not provide as much protection for the casket.

He wanted the conventional burial. It is family tradition.

The next day, Fiene left with the Oehlerkings for an extended vacation to visit relatives in Colorado. They took Fiene to try to help lift his spirits, Oehlerking said.

"It was wonderful for him. He just enjoyed himself so much," Oehlerking recalled. "This made a big change for him, and it did relieve it, but still, in the background, there were these feelings that this isn't complete."

AND WHEN Fiene returned this week, the things that hadn't been done remained. The sympathy cards were waiting in the mailbox. The burial was awaiting an end to the strike.

Now, Fiene hopes it can take place soon. He doesn't know whether there will be a ceremony at the cemetery other than that a couple of witnesses from the family will attend.

"We're going to miss my mother-in-law, and so will my dad, but there will be some relief after the interment," Oehlerking observed. "That's not really the word I want, but you know what I mean.

"The finality isn't here yet."

Rehearing sought on Viator rule

by KURT BAER
and PAUL GORES

Arlington Heights will go back to court rather than begin what could be a fruitless search for low-income housing sites in the village.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan said Friday that the village will seek judicial review of a U.S. appeals court order that said the village should look for an alternative site for a low-income townhouse project planned next to St. Viator High School.

A similar search of 14 undisclosed locations in Arlington Heights in 1972 concluded that there was no acceptable alternative to the 15-acre site at Euclid Avenue and Drury lane.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS say that to renew the search would put them in a "no win" position on the controversial low-income housing issue.

"From what I understand, the village has to prove there are other sites available. If we are unable to do so, that is proof we turned down the Lincoln Green project for racial reasons," Ryan said.

If the village can find another site, it runs the risk that the court will order low-income housing at that location.

In 1972, a three-month search by former Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson and Salvatore Ferrara, director of the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., that wants to build Lincoln Green, failed to come up with an alternative to the Viator location.

Nine of the 14 sites were unacceptable because the property was too distant to transportation, shopping and schools, or because it was adjacent to single family homes; five other sites were judged too expensive.

THE SITE LIMITATION has been noted by both the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court during the five-year legal battle over Lincoln Green.

"The village had no other current plans for building low and moderate income housing and no other R-5 (multi-family) parcels in the village were available to MHDC at an economically feasible price," the Supreme Court said in its January opinion upholding the village's decision not to rezone the Viatorian property.

"The ultimate effect of the village's decision is, in all probability, that no Sec. 236 (subsidized) housing will be built in Arlington Heights since plaintiffs were unable to find an economically feasible and suitable site," the appeals court said in a 1975 opinion that overruled the village.

Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel said the village probably will seek a rehearing before the appeals court. "If that is denied, we will ask the Supreme Court to have another look," he said.

Siegel said he was very surprised that the court ordered the village to search for other sites for low-income housing. "We don't have to do that for anyone else. I don't know why we should be required to do it in this case," he said.

RYAN SAID it was unusual for the village to be responsible for proving its own innocence by finding alternate housing sites.

"I don't feel the village under law has that burden. The burden of proof is usually on the plaintiff. This is a

Local school officials leery about boon in state aid

Herald Staff Report

Northwest suburban school officials are pleased but skeptical about the $3 billion state education spending plan signed Friday by Gov. James R. Thompson, the governor had backed down from an earlier threat to veto additions to his education budget after the General Assembly had passed a $2.4 million increase to Thompson's school aid appropriations plan.

Officials said Friday they will not revise their 1977-78 budgets immediately to allow for the aid increase because of past experience that saw state aid fall short of full funding for several years.

ABOUT 95 per cent of the state's school aid formula will be funded under the new appropriations and Thompson promised that the state will be able to pay its full share of the school aid formula during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, 1978. The school-aid formula was mandated by the 1970 state constitution and requires the state to provide at least half the costs of elementary and high school education.

The state's share of the school aid formula is up about 7 per cent this year, with $1.29 billion for the common school fund, $900 million for categorical grants and special education programs and $209 million for the teachers retirement plan.

The approval of the elementary and secondary education appropriations, coupled with the $884 million appropriation for state universities, completes the appropriation process for education and eliminates the chances of a heated veto override session on the topic in the fall.

Illinois lawmakers have fought during the past two years over efforts to force school spending at limits above those set by former Gov. Daniel Walker.

While praising the governor's quick action on the appropriations, state School Supt. Joseph Cronin said the schools will "still be 5 per cent short of the money pledged by the state."

EDWARD GILBERT, High School Dist. 214 superintendent, said he is pleased with the 95 per cent figure because "at least there'll be some money for schools."

The higher figure means Dist. 214 qualifies for more state aid, he said, which is "favorable and welcome."

The new figure could mean more than $200,000 in extra revenue for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, said Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent of finances.

From past experience, however, the district still is basing its budget on a 93 per cent state aid figure, he said.

"It's nice to hear the legislature approved funding at 95 (per cent), but

New busing fees could save Dist. 59 $80,000

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Eliminating inconsistencies in the school busing program in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 could save the district $80,000.

A board of education member has proposed that these inconsistencies could be eliminated by requiring all junior high and parochial students living within 1½ miles of school to pay for busing.

The district currently provides free busing for 653 junior high school students and 103 parochial students living within the 1½-mile limit because they would have to cross a "hazardous area" to walk to school.

Most of these dangerous situations have been eliminated in recent years by the installation of traffic lights and sidewalks and the district is overdue in removing the hazardous classification, board member Richard Stamm said Friday.

REQUIRING THE 761 students from hazardous areas to pay for busing if they want it could save the district between $80,000 and $100,000, Al Lawson, administrator for business services, said.

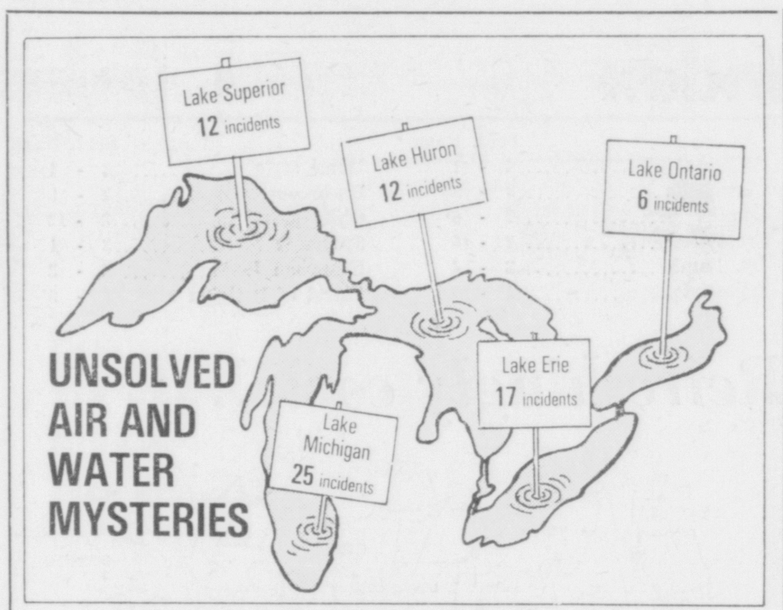

Aside from placing an unnecessary financial burden on the district, the hazardous area classification has been applied inconsistently to the benefit of students attending Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village, Stamm said.

Three hundred and sixty students from the Marshall and Salt Creek school attendance areas receive free busing to Lively even though a traffic light at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Biesterfield roads makes crossing safe, and they live within the 1½-mile limit, he said. The unnecessary busing costs the district $30,000, Stamm estimated.

AT THE SAME TIME, students attending Dempster Junior High School in Des Plaines are expected to walk across Dempster and Elmhurst roads or pay for busing if they are within the 1½-mile limit.

"Beisterfield and Arlington Heights roads aren't even as busy as Dempster and Elmhurst, but the Lively students are bused," Stamm said. "Ei-

Great Lakes area a deadly 'triangle'

by DIANE GRANAT

On the afternoon of Dec. 10, 1967, blues singer Otis Redding was traveling by airplane from Cleveland, Ohio, to Madison, Wis., crossing Lakes Erie and Michigan.

He never made it. His plane crashed not far from Lake Michigan, apparently because of engine failure. But, after a thorough investigation, the reason for the failure was never explained. The deaths of Redding and five other passengers remain a mystery.

Four years later another small plane crossing Lake Michigan along Redding's course met a similar fate. the engine lost its power and crashed, but authorities never determined why.

BOTH INCIDENTS occurred in the Great Lakes region — unremarkable by itself — except for the fact that there are dozens of other unsolved air and ship disasters recorded in this area.

Together, they add up to the mystery of the "Great Lakes Triangle."

This bizarre series of unexplained accidents, according to author Jay Gourley, makes the Great Lakes region "deadlier than the Bermuda Triangle."

The famous "Bermuda Triangle," or "Devil's Triangle" is bounded by the southeast coast of Florida, Bermuda and Puerto Rico. In that region more than 40 ships and 20 airplanes have vanished in the past 100 years without leaving a single trace.

YET IN THE Great Lakes region, Gourley says, at least 90 air and 30 shipping accidents have occurred in the last century, all

Explosion rips Alaska pipeline

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — A fiery explosion ripped through a pumping station on the Alaskan pipeline Friday, destroying the station and forcing a shutdown of the recently opened $9 billion, 799-mile system.

One worker was severely burned and five others suffered minor injuries.

Heavy North Slope oil spilled from the rupture, which was confined to the pumping station, and caught fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

Dense smoke billowed into the evening sky from the burning oil, but there was no damage to the pipeline itself.

The blast occurred after workers noticed a drop in pressure in the line and switched pumps at station No. 8, according to officials of the Alyeska Pipeline Services Co.

Army medic Raymond Foster said two of the injured were taken from the scene by helicopter and the other four by ambulance.

"The main building there, the pump station, was burning," he said. "It was gutted out, I don't know if by explosion or flames or what. Some oil spilled around, but the majority of it burned up."

Tom Mingen, a spokesman at Fairbanks Memorial Hospital, told UPI by telephone that six casualties were undergoing treatment — three at the hospital and three more at Bassett.

"WE'VE HEARD conflicting reports about the number of casualties," he said, "But Alyeska, the builder of the pipeline, has notified us not too many more are coming in, if any."

He said, "We immediately put our mass casualty disaster drill into effect, getting hold of all physicians in the area."

An Alyeska spokesman said the leading edge of the oil that was en route from Prudhoe to the ice-free port of Valdez had traveled through pump station No. 8 before the explosion. He said one pump was running at the time and a second was being started.

Earlier Friday, the flow of North Shore crude through the line was reported past the 500-mile mark and an Alyeska spokesman said the pipeline was about two-thirds full.

Earlier, the pipeline had been shut down for nearly three days when a nitrogen leak was detected at pump station No. 8 and a cracked elbow section had to be replaced.

At the time of the explosion, the oil flow was reported about one-half day ahead of predicted progress, which would have oil flowing into the Valdez storage tanks about July 20, 30 days after the start of pumping.

When the line is full, it will contain about nine million barrels of oil. Pumping capacity is 1.2 million barrels a day.

$30,000 in damage as fire hits store

A fire raged for 20 minutes Friday evening in a one-story brick building housing The Furniture Hutch, 930 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect, causing about $30,000 in damage, firefighters said. The fire started about 8:45 p.m. in the rear of the building and spread quickly to the front. The cause of the fire was undetermined. No injuries were reported. Adjacent stores were not damaged by the fire, firefighters said.

Sobczynski suspended from job

Roman Sobczynski, 34, of Prospect Heights, a key witness in the murder trial of Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, has been suspended from his job as a civil service recruiter with Cook County, it was announced Friday. Steven Klem, administrative assistant to the director of personnel for Cook County, said Sobczynski was suspended pending an investigation into several matters revealed during the trial. He was suspended June 27. Sobczynski, an unindicted coconspirator, testified during the trial he and a friend told Miss Columbo, 21, they would kill her parents for money, but they only went along with the plan to obtain sexual favors from Miss Columbo.

Girl dies 11 days after accident

An Arlington Heights girl died Thursday in Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, from injuries she sustained 11 days ago when she was struck by a car while riding her bicycle in Wheeling. The girl, Beth Norbeck, 15, of 11 E. Suffield Dr., had been breathing with the aid of a respirator until her death. She was pedaling her bike across Buffalo Grove Road near Burr Oak Drive June 26 when she was struck by a car driven by Steven Stern, 17, of 2638 N. Windsor Dr., Arlington Heights. Stern was ticketed for improper lane usage and failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

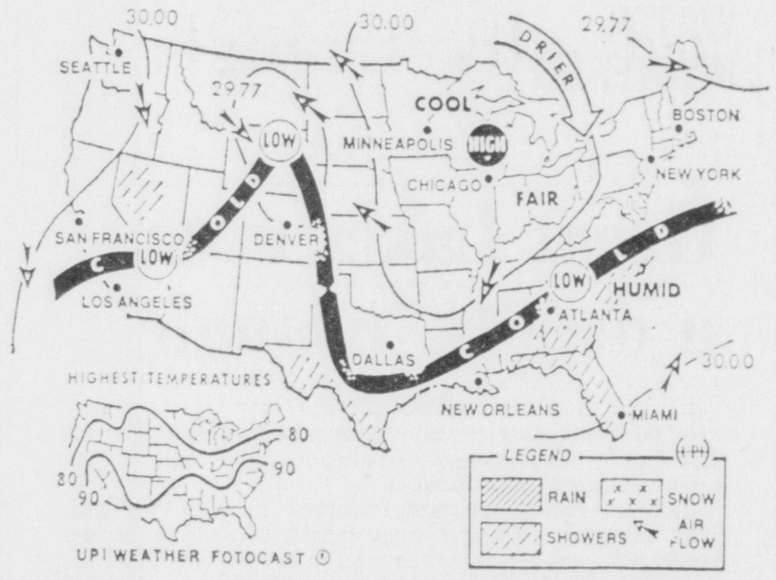

Trustee wants charges dropped

A former Wheeling village trustee has asked that bribery and official misconduct charges filed against him be dismissed because the evidence — a tape recording — was obtained improperly. The tape recorded an alleged bribe offer July 26, 1976, from Gilbert Monoson, then a village trustee, to George Carpin, a local businessman who was equipped with a recording device. Monoson also wants the tape suppressed. Monoson allegedly offered to use his influence to obtain a zoning variation for Carpin, president of GEC Industries, Wheeling, in exchange for a $10,000 noncollateral loan. Arguments in the case will be heard Aug. 3 in Cook County Circuit Court.

A PAIR OF "SIAMESE" twins who were joined from shoulder to waist were successfully separated by surgery at Children's Hospital in Washington, D.C., it was announced Friday. It was the first attempt ever to separate twins so thoroughly joined, doctors said. The twins are shown here on their arrival from Italy five weeks ago. The two girls now are about 13 weeks old.

Siamese twins 'quite hearty' after surgery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Siamese twins who were joined from the shoulder to waist have been successfully separated by a surgical team at Children's hospitai.

It was the first attempt ever to separate twins so thoroughly joined, according to Dr. Judson Randolph, who headed the surgical team.

The twins, who were flown in from Italy, were separated two weeks ago in a 10-hour operation involving seven surgeons, five anesthesiologists, seven nurses and a staff of 13 consulting specialists.

RANDOLPH SAID the baby girls are "quite hearty now. Their hearts and lungs are strong."

However, they will be listed in critical condition until the huge wounds in their upper torsos begin to heal, he said.

Randolph said when the twins, now 13 weeks old, arrived in Washington, "We felt their chances were slim."

Each twin had only one leg and kidney and they shared a liver, which was divided during surgery. Because they had separate circulatory systems, they required separate anesthesia during surgery.

Randolph said when the twins are older, they probably can be fitted with artificial legs.

THE TWINS WERE flown to Washington free by Trans World Airlines and their family will not be charged for their care.

The family was not identified, but the mother wrote a statement in Italian that was translated for the press which said:

"I was bringing with me to the United States two little jewels, two beautiful babies, who have been marked by a cruel destiny. As I looked with them I cried, thinking I would never be able to enjoy their beauty."

When told the babies might die during surgery, the mother wrote, she "was willing to take this risk . . . because this was the only thing left for them to have any possible future."

Randolph said in addition to the medical problems, there were ethical problems to be considered.

"We had to decide whether the risk (of surgery) should be taken," he said. "It was an enormous risk and these were two healthy decisions."

Thompson asks Legion for Class X support

by STEVE BROWN

Against a backdrop of saluting veterans, Gov. James R. Thompson Friday issued a spirited call to action for tougher anti-crime laws to head-off a "surrender of our streets to domestic assault" in Illinois.

The governor used the state American Legion convention as a tune-up for his summer campaign to stir up public support for his controversial Class X felony sentencing plan. That plan will be considered during a special legislative session in October.

While praising the Illinois General Assembly for passing a balanced budget, Thompson labeled the failure to approve the criminal sentencing package and other law and order reforms he backed "tragic.

"I THINK this was carrying politics just a little bit too far," Thompson said.

The governor coutinued his criticism of Illinois House Speaker William Redmond, D-Bensenville, who ruled that the tactics used to amend the Class X provisions onto another bill were not gernane.

Labeling Redmond's ruling a procedural trick, Thompson attempted to outline the difference between his proposals and one favored by Redmond, which resulted from a two-year study by an Illinois House committee.

Among the differences cited by the governor, was that the House bill would mean "Richard Speck, for example, would have to be assigned a prison release date. This is one governor who is never going to put his name on a piece of paper to let Richard Speck out of prison."

THOMPSON'S REMARKS were interrupted frequently by the applauding Legionaires who warmed to his call for legislation to get tough on crime.

The governor asked the group to contact lawmakers and tell of the need for additional legislation, saying he was willing to listen to compromise proposals,

"I need your help," Thompson said. "Sometimes the governor of the state has to go to the people and say, look, you can't be silent any longer, you have got to speak up. Between now and October, when the General Assembly comes back, decent law abiding people of the state have got to make their voices heard and make them heard loudly."

Belleau Lake takes third victim; suicide suspected

The third body in as many weeks was discovered in Belleau Lake in Maine Township early Friday by a group of Chicago boys swimming in the Cook County Forest Preserve lake.

Corby Scott Davis, 25, of Park Ridge, had been missing since Wednesday afternoon when four boys bumped into his partially submerged body at 1 a.m. Friday.

Forest Preserve Rangers who recovered the body in response to a call from the boys, Friday said they are investigating the possibility Davis is a suicide victim.

THE VICTIM'S girlfriend told rangers Davis had been talking of suicide and carried a week's supply of sleeping pills with him.

Davis was found floating on his stomach in the northeast corner of the lake, wearing a pair of light brown boxer shorts. Police said they found a pair of corduroy shorts on shore, but no evidence of any drugs. The Cook County Coroner is performing an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

Davis' mother, Margaret Davis, told police she dropped Corby off at the popular swimming hole Wednesday morning. When he had not returned by 3 p.m., she reported him missing.

Police said the Methodist Publishing House, Park Ridge, phoned Mrs. Davis on Thursday when they discovered papers from his wallet strewn about their parking lot. Police said they didn't know how the papers got there.

Belleau Lake, although posted with no swimming signs, has been the scene of two other drownings last month. The lake is located in the Cook County Forest Preserve off Busse Highway, just west of the Tri-State Tollway.

The bodies of Daniel E. McNally, 19, of Palatine, and Walter G. Johnson, 24, of Chicago, were found in the lake late last month.

Rehearing asked on court's rule in Viator case departure from existing law," he said.

The Arlington Heights Village Board will discuss the latest court opinion Monday night, Ryan said.

Ferrera said it would be more difficult to find an alternative site now than it was in 1972, and he predicted that MHDC's low-income housing goal in Arlington Heights would be met.

"If we could have found an alternative site that was legally, socially and in other ways acceptable, we would have used it," Ferrera said about the 1972 site search.

MHDC WILL HAVE no trouble complying with the appeals court order that it demonstrate that funds still are available to build Lincoln Green, he said.

"There is a large amount of subsidy money available," he said.

Ferrera said he did not know whether MHDC would go along with U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development's objective — that 30 per cent of Lincoln Green's tenants be selected from residents of public housing projects in Chicago.

HUD is actively trying to relocate tenants of Chicago public housing projects following a U.S. Supreme Court decision last April that HUD and the Chicago Housing Authority were guilty of racial discrimination for building public housing in predominantly black neighborhoods.

In Thursday's decision, the federal appeals court said that it did not have to find a discriminatory intent in the Arlington Heights Village Board's decision in 1971 not to rezone the Viatorian project from single to multi-family use.

A DISCRIMINATORY effect in certain instances will be sufficient to constitute a violation of the 1968 Fair Housing Act, the court said.

If it is proved that no other site in Arlington Heights is zoned or suitable for Lincoln Green, then the village will be enjoined from interfering with construction of the project, the court said.

The appeals court in its decision said it is broadly construing two provisions of the 1968 Fair Housing Act. The first makes it illegal to "make unavailable or deny . . . a dwelling to any person because of race, color, religion or national origin."

The second section makes it unlawful "to coerce, intimidate, threaten or interefere" with any person's right to fair housing.

THERE ARE relatively few undeveloped sites in Arlington Heights zoned for multi-family housing. Among them are: (1) Arlington Park Race Track; (2) property north of Forest View High School; (3) property west of Lake Briarwood; (4) a site in the Northgate subdivision; (5) land west of Northwest Community Hospital; (6) the abandoned Arlington Square project. Site 7 west of Hersey High School, has been mentioned as a possible multi-family location. A 1972 search of 14 similar sites failed to find an alternative to the Viatorian land which is starred.

THIS 15-ACRE site near St. Viator High School, at Euclid Avenue and Drury Lane, Arlington Heights, is the subject of a federal appeals court ruling that the village must find alternate sites for low-and moderate-income housing or allow the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp. to construct the proposed Lincoln Green housing development in the residential neighborhood.

Kuwait jet hijacked; 11 freed

KUWAIT (UPI) — Twelve gunmen believed to be Palestinian guerrillas hijacked a Kuwait Airways Beirut-to-Baghdad Boeing 707 jet Friday and forced it to land in Kuwait with dozens of hostages aboard.

They later released 11 of their captives and began negotiations with an Arab charge d'affaires who boarded the plane.

Among the passengers still being held was Kuwait's ambassador to Lebanon, according to Kuwait Radio.

One of the hijackers, identified as Abu Thair and believed to be a member of Al Fatah Palestinian guerrilla organizati on, left the plane to discuss the gunmen's demands with Kuwait's defense and foreign affairs ministers.

HE WAS accompanied by Southern Yemen's charge d'affaires, who had boarded the aircraft earlier to negotiate with the hijackers.

The four men met inside the airport building and the hijacker, again accompanied by the Arab diplomat, returned to the plane carrying the Kuwaitis' replies to the demands.

Neither the demands nor the replies were disclosed, but the Middle East News Agency said in Beirut it "learned the hijackers were a mixture of Lebanese and Palestinians" and were demanding the release of 300 prisoners from six Arab countries.

Kuwaiti officials would not confirm either report but did say the hijackers had requested the ambassadors of six Arab countries come to the airport.

ONE OF the freed passengers told bystanders at the airport the gunmen were seeking the release of 200 prisoners.

Kuwaiti officials said Thair had not identified the nationality or political learnings of the gunmen except to say they were "not terrorsts but people who fight for their rightful place."

The officials said this led them to believe the hijackers were Palestinians.

The ambassadors of Tunisia, Morocco, Southern Yemen Iraq, Libya and Algeria rushed to the airport to join in negotiations, Kuwaiti airport officials said.

One of the hijackers guarded the cockpit of the pirated plane with a machinegun, the Middle East News Agency said. A second reportedly stationed himself at the rear exit with a rifle, while the other hijackers were spaced throughout the rest of the plane with pistols.

Officials leery about school aid

the end result is not definite because the districts don't have their (state aid) claims in yet," he said.

CRONIN ALSO gave the governor a clear signal that additional new spending will be needed in the future, especially to aid desegregation efforts in Springfield, Rockford and Chicago.

The state will provide $1 million this year and Cronin estimated the cost may escalate to $10 to $12 million next year.

"This will need to become something of a high priority for all of us in the years to come, "Cronin said. After the bill signing ceremony, Cronin said the money will not necessarily be used for busing programs but to ensure quality education programs will be maintained.

Cronin said while there were no definite plans to include suburban school districts in the Chicago school desegregation plan, such a possibility has not been ruled out.

The governor said the increased state school spending, which will direct the bulk of the additional revenue during the coming year to education, puts Illinois ahead of any other comparable state in the nation.

"This represents a substantial investment by the people of Illinois in the children of Illinois," Thompson said.

Guatemala invasion threat against Belize withdrawn

BELIZE CITY, Belize (UPI) — British army troops patrolled the border with Guatemala Friday, but the threat of war dissolved in a Washington cocktail party and British offers of economic aid.

Guatemala's threat to invade Belize, one of Britain's last colonies which Guatemala has claimed for 150 years, lapsed late Thursday night following an agreement with British negotiators in Washington to work to defuse the issue.

As hundreds of British reinforcements, veterans from Northern Ireland, took positions along the frontier, the negotiators were shaking hands at a cocktail party in Washington to celebrate the end of the latest invasion threat.

BRITAIN HAS pledged to grant independence to Belize, its last colony in North or Central America. However, Guatemala threatened to invade the colony if it is granted independence.

Belize newspapers Friday headlined the Washington agreement, the result of two days of talks between Guatemalan and British negotiating teams.

According to the joint communique, British Minister of State Ted Rowlands will visit Guatemala "as soon as possible in order to discuss means of reducing tensions and the next stages in the negotiations."

BELIZE SOURCES said the British army reinforcements rushed to Belize Thursday will stay there until Rowlands makes his visit.

The Washington communique said the British side had explained that procedures for independence "took time, were always public and never secret. There could not therefore be any sudden move toward independence for Belize."

In Guatemala, the government was broadcasting the results of the Washington talks on nationwide radio and television noting they had yielded "positive triumphs" for Guatemala.

One of these, said a broadcast message, was the "formal promise of Great Britain not to grant unilateral independence to Belize."

with undetermined causes. Hundreds of people died in these tragedies.

Gourley, an aviator turned journalist, has written a book to be published this month on what he feels is an exceptionally high number of strange incidents in the Great Lakes.

One of the best known incidents to occur in this area is the November 1975 wreck of the vessel, the "Edmund Fitzgerald."

The wreck, immortalized in Gordon Lightfoot's successful song, occurred on Lake Superior. Carrying 26,000 tons of iron ore, the "Edmund Fitzgerald" disappeared and the 29 crewmen were lost.

EVENTUALLY some debris was recovered from the sunken vessel, but there was never any sign of survivors.

What Gourley says is unusual about the ship's fate is that few life rafts or lifeboats were found. "Whatever fate befell the Fitzgerald," he says, "it struck with such speed that her crew lacked even the time to be afraid."

Other odd events on Lake Michigan, which Gourley records, include:

• In June 1950, Northwest Flight No. 2501, bound from New York to Seattle, disappeared with its pilots and 55 passengers. To this day, the only remnant of the flight was the pilot's logbook found floating on the surface of Lake Michigan near Benton Harbor, Mich. Also strange was the fact that the pilot never sent any distress signals before the disappearance.

• A flight from New York to Chicago's Meigs Field left on March 8, 1968, with six people aboard. As it approached Lake Michigan, the plane vanished from radar. For several minutes the pilot kept up radio communication with air controllers while crossing the lake. But suddenly it vanished. All but one of the bodies were found. The plane never turned up.

• Carting a load of Christmas trees to Chicago the "Rouse Simmons" left Michigan shores in November 1913. Along the way the ship ran into problems and flew distress signals. Before help arrived, however, she sank with her crew. After 10 years of searching, the only sign of the ship found was the captain's wallet.

In addition to more than 20 other Lake Michigan mysteries, Gourley lists 12 on or over Lake Superior, 12 at Lake Huron, 17 at Lake Erie and six at Lake Ontario. Almost 50 other peculiar events in the Great Lakes vicinity are also listed.

Gourley's stories are documented with details from the National Transportation Safety Board and its Canadian equivalent.

The accidents are classified by some clue to their cause: engine failures, radio or instrument troubles, severe weather, even crew insanity.

BUT THE ITEMS included in "The Great Lakes Triangle" are there because they are all listed in "cause undetermined" files.

Gourley offers several explanations for why he believes there is an abnormally heavy concentration of perplexing accidents in the Great Lakes area.

Some of the theories are borrowed from research on the Bermuda Triangle. One attributes the plane and boat losses to a change in the earth's magnetic field. Another suggests the presence of a hole in the galaxy which allows objects to slip out of space and time.

Among all the theories, Gourley refuses to pick one which he believes is correct.

"Most of these accidents are cases that have been thoroughly investigated by the world's foremost authorities on the subject," Gourley said. "It would be arrogant of me to try to explain what happened, when the experts don't know."

"I just honestly don't know why."

Natural gas cost up 100% since '72

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas prices to homes across the nation have risen by 20 to 40 per cent in each year since 1972, and the bitter cold of last winter drove prices up even more steeply in many cities, a new report said Friday.

Presenting its first nationwide survey of residential gas prices, the National Assn. of Regulatory Utility Commissioners said chronic shortages are most to blame for the increasingly high cost of America's most precious fuel.

It also said, however, that the higher prices reflect increased exploration, production, transmission and distribution costs, wellhead price hikes allowed by the Federal Power Commission and costly emergency purchases of gas or propane in some areas last winter.

GORDON POZZA, director of economics for the quasigovernmental, nonprofit association, said natural gas still is the nation's cheapest fuel but "the trend in prices is definitely upward."

"The cost of natural gas for house-heating and other residential uses has been increasing rapidly since the early seventies," the report said. "In most major gas consuming areas of the country, residential gas prices are increasing at annual rates ranging from 20 per cent to as high as 40 per cent."

The report surveyed residential gas heating costs for each of the past five heating seasons in 20 metropolitan areas and found average annual increases during the period were at least 15 per cent in every city.

The steepest average yearly price hikes, the report said, were 46 per cent in Houston, 33.8 per cent in Dallas, 31.5 per cent in Detroit and 30.9 per cent in Cincinnati. The lowest, it said, were 15 per cent in Atlanta, 15.9 per cent in Philadelphia and 17.1 per cent in Minneapolis-St. Paul.

In addition to its five-year survey, the report also examined changes in gas prices between the winter of 1975-76 and the record cold winter of 1976-77.

"PRICES ROSE precipitously in most metropolitan areas," it said. "Consumers in Cincinnati, Dallas and Kansas City were the hardest hit, paying heating gas prices over 40 per cent higher than in the previous winter season."

An even sharper picture of the impact of last winter's cold emerges from a comparison of gas cost increases in 40 major cities between February 1976 and February 1977, the report said.

Dallas led that list, with a 52.6 per cent increase. Cleveland was up 48.5 per cent; Kansas City 42.8 per cent; Columbia, S.C., 41.2 per cent; Wichita, Kan., 40.4 per cent and Cincinatti 40.2 per cent.

At the low end of the February comparisons, the report said, increases of less than 10 per cent were recorded in the District of Columbia; Norfolk, Va.; Philadelphia; Wilmington, Del.; and Newark, N.J. St. Paul, Minn., showed a decrease of 5.9 per cent, the only decrease recorded.

Copley papers accused of aiding FBI, CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Penthouse magazine said Friday the California-based Copley newspaper group and its domestic and Latin American news service for two decades "acted as intelligence arms of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

An article in the August edition said "no less than 23 Copley News Service employes had worked for the CIA simultaneously" over the years. It said the employes also performed services for the FBI such as identifying anti-war and dissident individuals and groups.

The 23 alleged Copley-CIA employes were not identified. Most apparently were stringers for the news service in its once extensive Latin American operation.

RICHARD G. Capen Jr., senior vice president of operations, for Copley Press, denied the charges.

"As to the allegation of a linkage between the CIA and Copley newspapers or Copley News Service," "we have been assured by the highest levels within the CIA that no employes of Copley newspapers or CNS have been employes of the agency," he said.

Capen said the Penthouse charges are "old allegations that Copley newspapers have repeatedly denied over the past two years."

A CIA spokesman declined comment until he had seen the full article.

Joe Trento, a Democrat who originally voiced the charges against Copley in his unsuccessful campaign for Congress in California last year, and freelance reporter Dave Roman said their findings were the result of a year-long investigation of Copley Press, Inc. under a $2,000 grant from the Fund for Investigative Journalism.

THEY SAID the Copley connections personally were worked out in 1952-1953 and thereafter by the late James S. Copley with President Dwight D. Eisenhower and FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

The activities apparently stopped with the death of Copley in 1973, they said, but some employes who formerly also worked for the CIA were still on the payroll.

The article said that Copley News Service exchanged intelligence information with the CIA for "scoops," harbored CIA operatives on the payroll and provided client newspapers with stories at the request of the intelligence organizations.

Herb Klein and Gerald Warren, two of Richard Nixon's staff, served as editors of the San Diego Union, "the Copley Flagship newspaper." Warren, the current editor, was quoted by the Penthouse article as saying he vaguely remembered the system to supply the FBI with memos on the Black Panthers and other groups.

Nazi march ruling may come Monday

CHICAGO (UPI) — A three-judge Illinois Appellate Court panel promised Friday to rule soon, possibly as early as Monday, on whether to lift a ban on a Nazi march through the predominantly Jewish suburb of Skokie. Presiding Judge Mayer Goldberg said during a hearing at the Daley Center that the panel would make a ruling soon, possibly Monday, on an order by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Joseph M. Wosik forbidding the march. David A. Goldberger, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney who is representing the Nazis, argued Wosik's order barring a march by members of the National Socialists party of America was a prior restraint on their right to freedom of speech. "We must put our duty as officers of the court above our human feeling," Goldberger said. Wosik, at the request of Skokie officials, issued orders April 28 and May 6 prohibiting the Nazis from marching through the village. But the U.S. Supreme Court June 15 ordered Illinois courts to quickly review the ban or lift it.

Aleman rips FBI 'terror'

Reputed crime syndicate figure Harry Aleman Friday said one of his children had "sort of a nervous breakdown" because FBI agents terrorized his children in searching his suburban Melrose Park home last week. He made the accusation after pleading innocent to charges he ran a home invasion ring.

Aleman said agents went into his house "like storm troopers." His lawyer said FBI agents "ransacked" Aleman's house. Aleman, arrested Monday in Dallas after returning to the United States from Mexico, was indicted July 1. He and three others were charged with participating in home invasions in the Chicago area and Indianapolis. A judge found Aleman innocent in March of a charge of murdering Teamsters Union steward William Logan.

'Big Tuna' heart attack told

Anthony J. (Big Tuna) Accardo, onetime bodyguard for crime czar Al Capone and the reputed head of the Chicago crime syndicate, was recuperating Friday from a severe heart attack, the FBI said. Accardo, 70, suffered the heart attack in late June while in Bimini in the Bahama Islands, the FBI said. It was reported Accardo was stricken two weeks after a "minisummit meeting" of Midwest syndicate leaders in the Bahamas. A spokesman for the FBI said Accardo was transferred to the intensive care unit of St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital after suffering the attack. He is now reported to be recovering at his home in River Forest, a near west suburb. Although indicted on charges of gambling and impersonating a lawyer, Accardo has never been convicted.

Can't stop bid rigger contracts

The state can do little to block the award of a $3.5 million contract to a pair of companies whose owners pleaded guilty to bidrigging charges, an aide to Gov. James R. Thompson said Friday. The owners of Brighton Building and Maintenance Co. and Krug Excavating Co. were indicted in bid-rigging and mail fraud cases related to repair work on the Stevenson Expressway in Chicago and construction at O'Hare International Airport. A spokesman for Thompson said some of the governor's top aides discussed what the state could do after they learned the firms won a contract for repair work on the Dan Ryan Expressway. He said they decided it was too late to try to stop the contract award and did not appear the state would be on solid legal ground if it tried to interfere.

Illinois Power workers strike

Some 2,400 Illinois Power Co. employes went on strike Friday in central and Southern Illinois, while Central Illinois Light Co. and a union held marathon bargaining talks to avert a possible strike by 280 employes at midnight Friday. The IPC employes walked off their jobs at power plants, service units and offices at 12:01 a.m. Friday when the extension on their old contract expired. "It's on," Johnson Kanady, assistant to the president of IPC, said of the strike. "Supervisory personnel took over at midnight." Members of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 1306 in Decatur, Local 51 in Springfield, Local 309 in Collinsville and Local 702 in West Frankfort rejected the latest IPC contract proposal Wednesday.

Th old contract expired July 1, but was extended to permit voting on the contract proposal.

"There was just not enough there to satisfy the people," said Gerald Hawkins, spokesman for IBEW Local 1306.

Water short cities vulnerable

Illinois cities which were hit by water shortages last fall are "clear candidates" for shortages again, William C. Ackermann, chief of the Illinois Water Survey, says. Ackerman said lighter than normal amounts of rain have lowered groundwater levels and stream flow drastically in central Illinois, particularly in areas northwest of Champaign. Northern and Southern Illinois are reasonably well supplied with water and received normal amounts in June, he said.

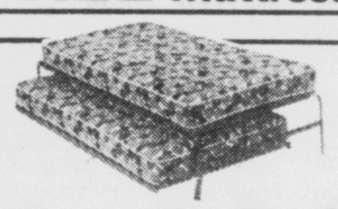

With groundwater levels in central Illinois already two to 10 feet below the norm for July 1, the state still faces dry periods which reach a peak in October, he said, and "a shortage of shallow groundwater is almost an inevitability." Even in Southern Illinois, where Harrisburg received more than 5 inches more rain than normal last month, water shortages are possible because many cities get their water from shallow wells and ponds.

Peoria jail woes 'not typical'

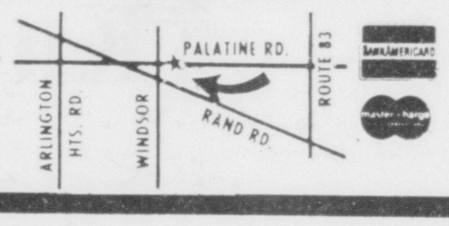

Conditions at the Peoria County Jail, termed unsafe and overcrowded by a county grand jury, are not typical of city and county jails across the state, a corrections official said Friday. Oliver O'Kier, chief of the Bureau of Detention Standards and Services for the Illinois Department of Corrections, said statewide standards established in 1970 and public awareness of past poor jail conditions have helped solve many problems. "I think there's an awareness by county officials that they do have to keep up with the times," O'Kier said. He cited new jails in Rockford, Freeport, Jo Davies County, Morris, Galesburg, Bloomington and Danville as examples. Peoria and Champaign counties have been warned that existing facilities are inadequate, O'Kier said. A Peoria grand jury has called for an immediate shutdown of the county jail, citing fire hazards and overcrowding conditions, and a referendum to build a new Champaign jail has failed. Officials in both areas are still working on the problem, he said.

Cook County Sheriff's police and detectives from Ypsilanti, Mich., Friday apprehended a 23-year-old Michigan man wanted for questioning in Thursday's murder of a Prospect Heights man.

Ypsilanti police said they apprehended Brian Thompson without a struggle in his home in Ypsilanti about 5:30 p.m. Thompson will be questioned by Cook County Sheriff's police in connection with the murder of Mark VanDellen at the Lake Run apartment building, 16 E. Old Willow Rd., Prospect Heights.

Police believe the murder resulted from a love triangle involving VanDellen's girlfriend, Angela Morgan, 21, with whom he was living, and her former boyfriend, Thompson.

Thompson had dated Miss Morgan for seven years until six months ago, sheriff's police said.

VanDellen was employed as a carpet-layer at the Pedian Rug Co., Arlington Heights, and had moved into Miss Morgan's apartment three weeks ago, police said. He formerly lived in Glenview.

Dist. 59 considering busing fees

ther we should bus at Dempster or we should stop busing at Lively."

Equally inconsistent is the situation at Holmes Junior High School, 1900 W. Lonquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, where 180 students are bused because they live in hazardous areas, he said.

All but 30 of these students live south of Golf Road and east of Arlington Heights Road and can cross safely at traffic lights at the intersections of Golf and Goebbert roads and Golf and Busse roads, Stamm said.

The 30 Holmes students from the Surrey Ridge area in Arlington Heights may have to remain in a hazardous category because there is no road between their homes and their school except Golf, he said.

The Lake Briarwood area near Mount Prospect, however, can be removed from the hazardous category, Stamm said. With traffic lights at the intersections of Busse and Dempster, Lineman and Dempster, and Algonquin and Dempster, the 75 Lake Briarwood students should have no problem walking to Dempster Junior High School, he said.

LAWSON, HOWEVER, said the intersection of Dempster and Algonquin roads is a bad one, noting students would have to walk about a mile along Dempster which has only intermittent sidewalks.

The elimination of the hazardous area classification also would mean the end of free busing for 108 students at St. Zachary School, 567 W. Algonquin Rd., Des Plaines, who live within the 1½-mile limit and can cross safely with the aid of traffic lights at Marshall and Dempster roads, Stamm said.

The district would continue free busing, however, for 419 other parochial students who live beyond the 1½-mile limit. Of these, 238 attend Queen of the Rosary School, 750 E. Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village; 77 attend St. John's Lutheran School, 1101 Linneman, Mount Prospect; and 104 attend St. Zachary's.

About half of the parochial students are receiving free transportation because they participate in a dual enrollment program at either Grove or Friendship junior high schools.

BY LAW, as long as the district is providing free transportation for dual enrollment students living more than 1½-miles from school, it must also provide free transportation for full-time parochial students in the same area, provided they wait on established bus stops, Lawson said.

Dist. 59 has no dual enrollment program with St. John's but spends $22,000 to bus students there from throughout the district because it is busing students from Queen of the Rosary and St. Zachary's, he said.

The state reimburses Dist. 59 $20 per pupil for transporting these parochial students, leaving the district with a $60 loss per student, Lawson said.

Stamm is proposing no change in this situation.

The transportation changes Stamm is proposing in the elementary school area involve transferring 140 students who are now bused to Brentwood School in Des Plaines and High Ridge Knolls School in Mount Prospect to Frost School in Mount Prospect so they would live within walking distance. The students live within an area bounded by Linneman, Dempster, Elmhurst and Golf roads.

Facts and figures about insulspray® foam insulation

WHERE HEAT ESCAPES IN A TYPICAL TWO STORY HOME

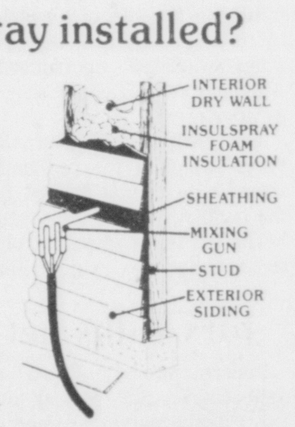

Source: American Society Heating, Refrigeration, Air Conditioning Engineers Handbook of Fundamentals

First, some straight talk
Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?
Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

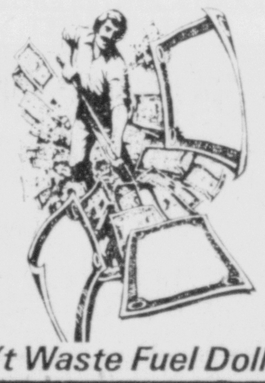

How is Insulspray installed?
Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.

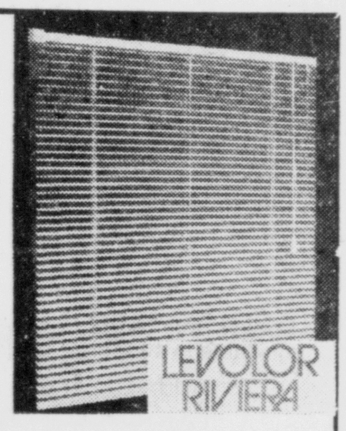

What are the advantages?
First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

Other benefits are:
• Insulspray absorbs noise so your home becomes quieter.
• It eliminates space for rodents and pests in your walls and resists most mold, mildew and fungi.

Defector asks U.S. to aid family

The Chinese MiG19 pilot who defected to Taiwan appealed to Secy. of State Cyrus Vance Friday to help avert the "certainty" of Communist persecution of his family left behind on the mainland. The 41-year-old squadron commander, Fan Yuan-yen, said life on the mainland is marked by deprivation and compulsory political indoctrination. "We are suffering so much and we know it's far better off in Taiwan," he said. "If given the chance, I believe many of my former colleagues will defect to Taiwan."

Fan, who defected Thursday by veering off course while his squadron flew a routine patrol mission over the Formosa Strait, appeared before reporters for the first time Friday at a news conference. The crew-cut pilot, wearing a khaki shirt and blue pants and a Browning automatic pistol, appeared relaxed and at ease. "I will do whatever the government here asks me to do," he said.

Albania rips 'friend' China

Albania has lashed out at its only friend in the world — China — warning that closer ties with the United States are a mistake and lecturing Peking on the real teachings of Marxism-Leninism. "The principle that 'my enemy's enemy is my friend' cannot be applied when it is a matter of the two inperialist superpowers, the Soviet Union and the United States," the official newspaper Zeri I Popullit (Voice of the People) said in a commentary published Thursday.

The newspaper, organ of Albania's ultra-leftist ruling Communist party, does not circulate outside the country, but the text of the article was distributed Friday by the official Albanian news agency.

Bhutto won't be charged

Pakistan's new military leader Friday said he will not bring charges ousted Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto despite a resolution at his home mosque calling Bhutto a "criminal to the nation." Gen. Zia ul-Har, who overthrew Bhutto in a bloodless coup Tuesday, told worshipers at the mosque where he has prayed for years that he was "saddened" by the resolution passed during afternoon prayers. Bhutto has been held at the Prime Minister's summer resort house in Murree, 30 miles north of Rawalpindi, since his arrest Tuesday.

Egypt police ban nab terrorist

Police in Cairo, Egypt, Friday tracked down and arrested Shukri Ahmed Mustafa, leader of the fanatical Moslem group that kidnapped and killed a former cabinet minister, ending a three-year manhunt. The bearded 34-year-old cult leader, who is revered by his followers as "chosen one, prince of the faithful and Allah's caliph on earth," was picked up in a Cairo slum where he was hiding with one of his three wives and their son. Police, who have been hunting the leader of the Penance and Retreat Society for three years, said they "seized highly important documents revealing the dimensions of the group" at Mustafa's hovel, and arrested several other members of the group in another raid.

Flash floods in Korea kill 100

Flash floods and mudslides triggered by torrential rainstorms late Friday and early Saturday killed more than 100 South Koreans in and around Seoul and drove tens of thousands more from their homes, authorities reported. Official tabulations at mid-morning listed 111 persons dead, 50 others missing and 93 injured, many of them seriously. More than 15 inches of rain fell in the Yungdungpo area of Seoul in a few hours, authorities said. Also hard hit were Inchon, Anyang and Suwon located in a wide arc 10 to 30 miles west and south of Seoul.

Mudslides and flooding killed at least 33 persons in Seoul itself and injured 56. Seven persons were missing. Police in Kyunggi province adjacent to Seoul reported 78 dead, 43 missing and 37 injured. More than 20,000 persons fled their flooded homes in the stricken areas, authorities said.

U.S., Soviets OK science pact

The United States and the Soviet Union, in conflict over human rights and arms control, renewed a science agreement Friday and called it proof of improving U.S.-Soviet relations. Officials of the two nations signed a five-year extension of the 1972 Agreement on Cooperation in Science and Technology, which has focused chiefly on joint efforts to improve weather prediction, develop information on earthquakes and promote peaceful use of atomic power.

Neutron been around a while

The suddenly controversial neutron bomb has been in the U.S. arsenal in various forms for years, defense officials said Friday. They said, for example, that when James Schlesinger took his family to the site of an underground atomic test in 1971 to prove there was no hazard, the device exploded was an "enhanced radiation" warhead — a neutron bomb. Schlesinger, then head of the Atomic Energy Commission, is now President Carter's chief energy adviser.

The warhead tested in Alaska during his visit was one of two types designed for the antiballistic missile rocket system then intended to defend against Soviet strategic missiles. Officials said the technology that went into the "enhanced radiation" ABM warheads led to development of the "people killer" bombs that some senators now are trying to ban.

Jury talks net $250 each

Federal jurors in Detroit each have earned $250 so far during deliberations that passed the 10-day mark Friday in the trial of two Filipino nurses accused of poisoning VA hospital patients. The nine women and three men, along with four alternates, have been paid a $25 daily fee through most of the three-month U.S. District Court trial of Filipina Narciso, 31, and Leonora Perez, 33. The fee was $20 for the first 30 days in court.

Bolen named ambassador

David Bolen, a career diplomat for 27 years, was nominated Friday to be ambassador to East Germany. Bolen, 53, a native of Heflin, La., was ambassador to Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland 1973-76 until he became deputy assistant secretary of state for African affairs. He would succeed former Sen. John Sherman.

The White House also announced the following ambassadorial nominations: Bulgaria — Dr. Raymond L. Garthoff, 48, Milford, Conn., a specialist on Soviet affairs for 20 years for the Army, NATO and the State Department, where he has been a senior foreign service inspector since 1974. He would succeed Martin F. Herze. Nicaragua — Dr. Mauricio Solaun, 42, a native of Cuba, a sociologist at the University of Illinois since 1966. He would replace James D. Theberge. Guyana — John R. Burke, 52, Madison, Wis., a State Department foreign service officer since 1956 and deputy chief of mission in Bangkok since 1976. The post has been vacant since Max V. Krebs resigned.

Administration vows abuse of SBA will end

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration promised Friday to end business and political abuse of the Small Business Administration's program which aids minority companies.

The Senate federal spending subcommittee that got the promise from new SBA chief Vernon Weaver also heard agency officials tell of pressure on them from the Nixon administration to award minority contracts — sometimes to white-controlled firms or to wealthy blacks — in order to win black votes in the 1972 elections.

Weaver's testimony ended three days of hearings on how rich white businessmen have used lax rules to set up "black fronts" to get SBA assistance for new firms and then skim off the profits and leave the companies worthless.

WEAVER ACKNOWLEDGED "the program has been abused to the benefit of unscrupulous businessmen who have used minority businessmen as 'fronts.' "

But, he told the subcommittee, "I assure you that the necessary changes will be made to put the program on a sound basis. This agency will not tolerate continued abuses."

He said regulations would be tightened to prevent whites from exerting control over minority companies and to keep former government officials from participating in any SBA financial program for two years after leaving office.

Leonard Cole, the first head of the SBA minority contract program, testified he was bounced out of his job temporarily and then transferred voluntarily after Donald Dunlap, a friend of White House political adviser Harry Dent, was sent to the agency.

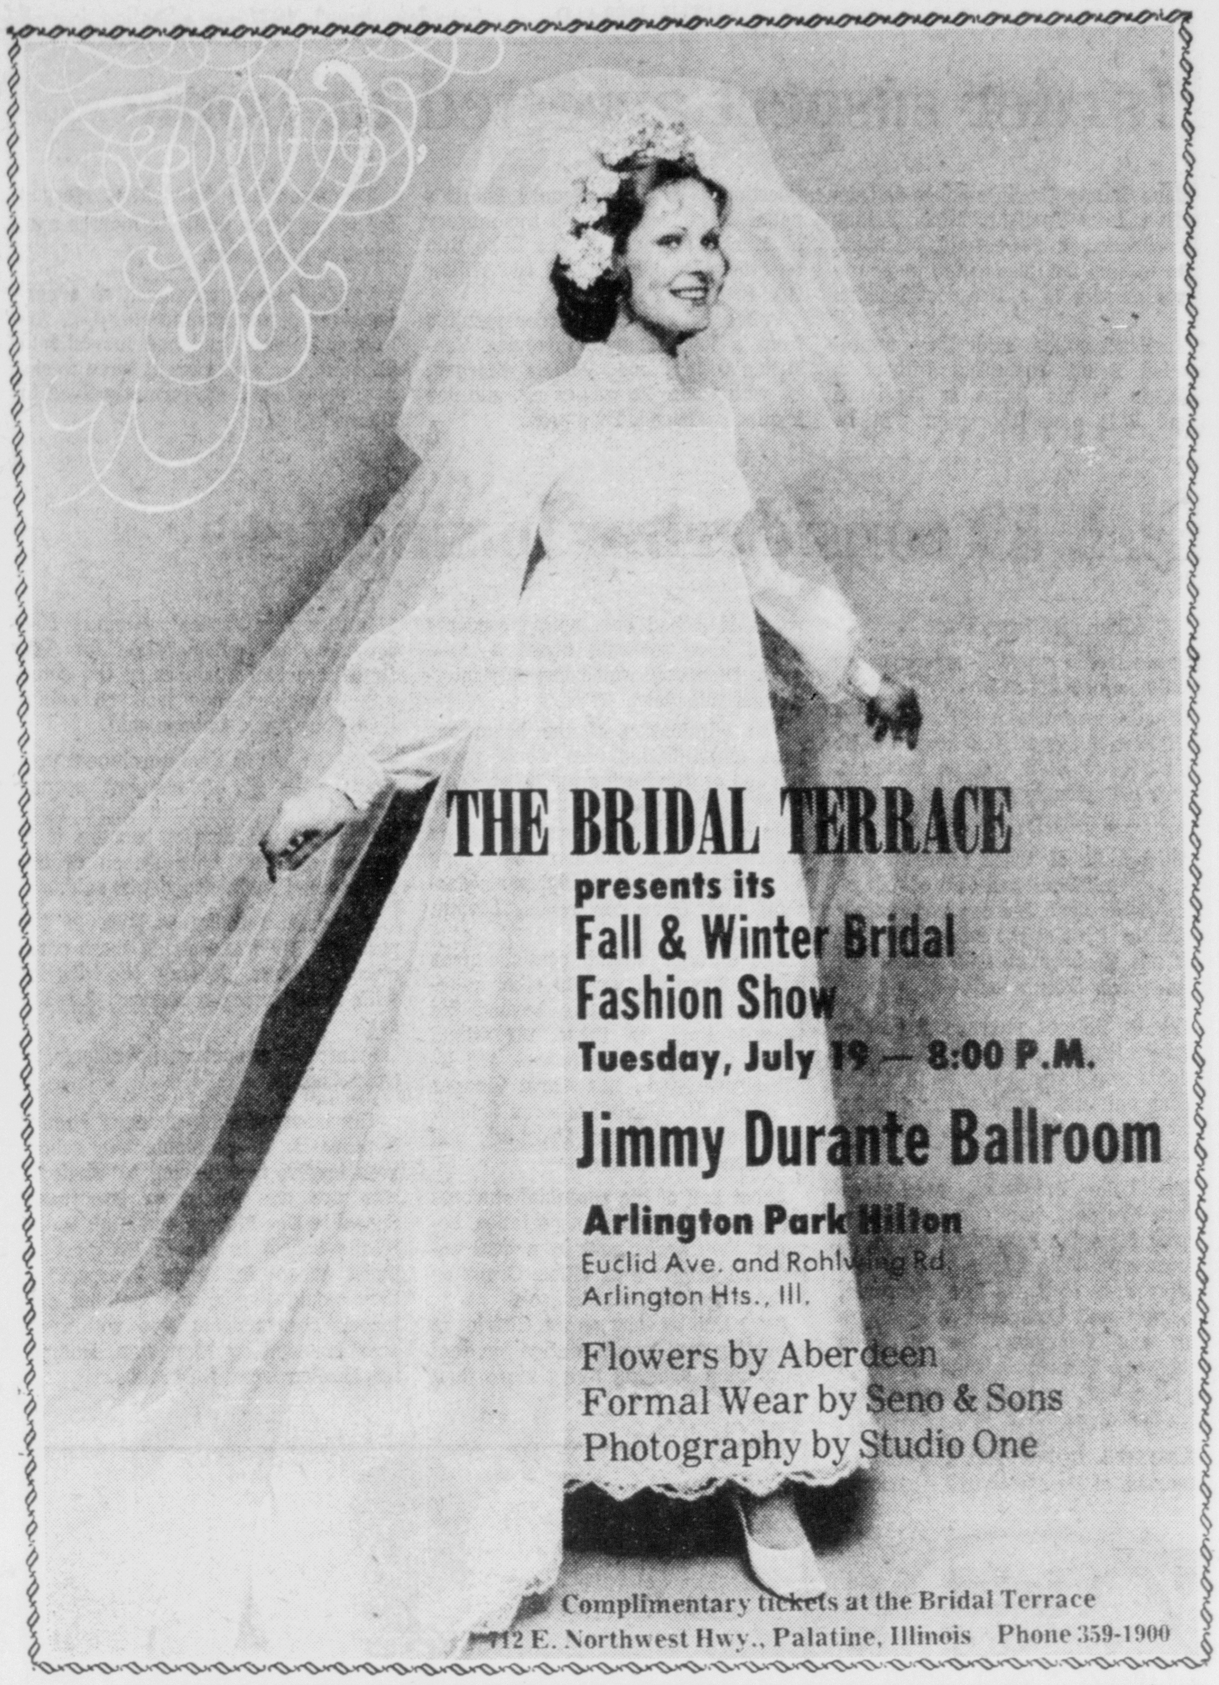

DESPITE HIS lack of experience, Cole said, Dunlap "was very actively involved in carrying out his mission in the program — to follow the feelings of Mr. Harry Dent to take as much advantage politically of the program as it was possible to take."

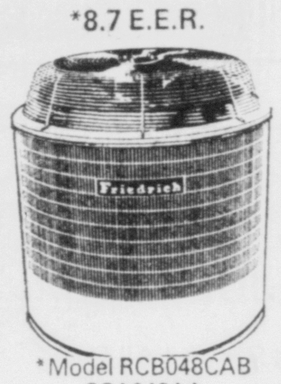

Dunlap said in an interview, "I think that's what a Democrat ought to say . . . That's the man's opinion. Harry Dent never exerted any pressure, never discussed getting anything for anybody."

Raymond Harshman, an SBA official who discovered a pattern of white businesses taking over minority firms, said the agency was "unbelievably political" in 1972.

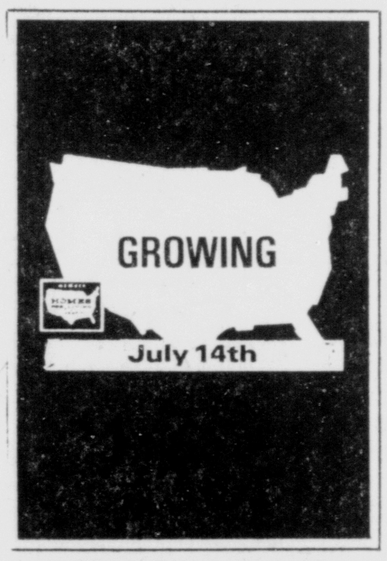

"It was a political summer and Mr. Dunlap was attempting to get contracts out in minority firms around the country that would make the Republican Party look very minority oriented," he said.

Dunlap said he was brought into the agency "because the administration wasn't happy with a floundering program that wasn't going anywhere. They needed somebody to kick it good and hard."

HUNDREDS OF RUNNERS racing the bulls at the San Fermin fiesta in Pamplona, Spain, tumbled into a massive human pile-up Friday and were trampled and gored by Miura fighting bulls. One person died and 37 were injured at the fiesta popularized by author Ernest Hemingway.

Bull kills teen in Pamplona run

PAMPLONA, Spain (UPI) — Hundreds of runners racing the bulls at the San Fermin Fiesta tumbled into a massive, screaming human pileup Friday and were trampled and gored by Miura fighting bulls.

One teen-aged Spaniard was killed and 37 others, including two Americans, injured. The Pamplona hospital said the two Americans were treated and released.

The death of Jose Joaquin Esparza, a 17-year-old student, was the first at the fiesta, popularized by Ernest Hemingway in his novel "The Sun Also Rises," since 1975 when a 42-year-old Spaniard was gored to death in a similar pileup. In the last 50 years, 11 persons have been killed.

THE TROUBLE started when a runner tripped and fell at the mouth of the narrow tunnel that leads from the street into the bullring. Dozens of other runners fell over him, touching off a scene of screaming, pushing and shoving celebrants trying to break free before the arrival of the bulls.

The bulls charged through the mass of humanity, goring the fallen runners with their deadly horns in a charge toward the arena where they were scheduled to be fought and killed Friday evening.

Dr. Carlos Juaristi, the bullring physician, said it was surprising that more persons were not hurt.

The Pamplona hospital said two Americans were treated and released after suffering minor injuries in the half-mile run from the bull corrals to the ring. A spokesman could identify them only as Tim Holander of New York state and Manuel Quiroga Quintana of Florida.

THE HOSPITAL said Angel Jimenez of Pamplona was in serious condition after being operated on for a horn wound in the left thigh and other wounds.

The bulls in Friday's run were of the Miura breed, considered Spain's most dangerous. Such a bull killed the famous matador Manolete in 1947.

Hemingway popularized the San Fermin festival in this Basque city with his novel. In the run, hundreds of aficionados "allow themselves to be chased through the streets for a morning's pleasure," as Hemingway described it.

CANCER DETECTION
HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood pressure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Master Charge accepted. Telephone (312) 885-1360.

Schaumburg Mattress Factory
THOUGHTS on a MATTRESS
For almost five years our little mattress factory has been doing an ever increasing business by attracting the astute, intelligent customer with the experience to recognize the difference between some so-called "discount" or "sale" price and a top quality product at a low price.
And we would like to emphasize one point - this is a FACTORY - not a "Factory Outlet" or "Factory Closeout Mart" or some other rip-off of just another retail store. We actually make our mattresses and box springs right here before your very eyes.
Our mattresses and box springs are made with top quality materials and specifications that have been proven over many years. Our prices are based on the cost of the materials that go into each product that we make. And we know that when you compare quality for quality, our prices are very, very low.
I guess that is why so many customers who have shopped all the so-called "sale" priced mattresses in the area come back and buy ours.
Incidentally, our service is excellent, too.

The Columbo's tragedy

The verdict came quickly and decisively from those who judged them. Patty Columbo and Frank DeLuca — guilty on all counts of brutally murdering Patty's parents and her teenage brother in their home in Elk Grove Village a year ago.

The judgment was clear, but what is not so obvious is the reason why Patty and her 39-year-old divorcee lover could do such a thing.

The surface answers already have been published. Patty, 20 years old when the murders occurred, wanted freedom from her family and was willing to kill to obtain it. It seems too simple an answer to a brutal, vengeance filled torture murder which was the final degredation of a young woman and the demise of her relationship with her family.

When the rebellion actually began is difficult to discern. One day she must have decided she wanted out and began to work to humiliate her parents and herself.

In small ways, she broke away, wearing scanty clothing to her Elk Grove High School classes. She began to steal and was placed on probation by the court for credit card fraud.

And she lied, about almost everything, her relatives say.

Then she met DeLuca at her job at the Walgreen store in Elk Grove Village where he was the manager. At this point, her conduct was beyond her parents' control.

She wanted to move in with her lover. Her father said no, fought with DeLuca, and spent the night in jail when he knocked DeLuca's teeth out in his futile effort to win back his daughter.

That night appears to have been the final attempt to repair the broken family. Patty, full of hate, left home and moved in with DeLuca.

The plot to kill her family began to be written that night.

The Columbo family dilemma is a tragic story, so twisted and senseless, one wonders how it might have been different. What kind of help could Patty and her family have received to transform despair and hate into a renewed family relationship?

You say: There probably was no chance. At some time it became too late.

But still there is the possibility that someone, a local organization, the police, referral agencies, counseling services, could have headed off this tragedy if there had been an opportunity.

Again, you say, probably not. It takes a sick person, a very sick person to murder. Indeed, that is what Patty became — a sick woman whose hate for her parents overshadowed all else.

There is little solace in the fact that Patty was found guilty, just reflections on what went wrong and speculation on how it might have been prevented.

Our comments on the case the U.S. Supreme Court faces on the question of reverse discrimination.

Don't overbuild hospitals

A federal health planning agency has concluded that a hospital planned for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove is unnecessary and would create an excess of 320 beds in the Northwest suburban area.

The study should be taken seriously by those involved with planning the hospital and by local officials who may be tempted to encourage it.

Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital, Chicago, has proposed a 232-bed facility on the east side of Schoenbeck Road near Hintz Road. They say the new hospital will serve Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Arlington Heights, Northbrook and southern Lake County.

However, the Suburban Cook County-DuPage County Health Systems Agency says the extra hospital beds are unneeded — and that each empty bed will cost $20,000 a year to maintain, thus driving up the costs of health care, costs which are paid by all of us.

An alternative to a fully equipped hospital might be an emergency room facility in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area which would cut the relatively long ambulance runs which are now needed to Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines or Condell Hospital in Libertyville.

Emergency room stations, coupled with paramedic programs, have been successful in other parts of the country, notably in California. They deserve study here.

What is not needed is an excess of hospital beds which will only serve to drive up health care costs borne by Northwest suburban residents and their insurance companies.

Mark Twain would be proud

Congress fights poverty

Paul Greenberg

It was a sequence that brought back Charles Dicken's old animadversions on the dignity of American democracy:

First the House of Representatives solemnly turned down a factitious proposal to raise its already grossly inflated pay by still another 6 per cent so it could with a clear conscience go on collecting the 29 per cent pay raise it had voted itself only last October. This may be the most acid comment on the conscience of congressmen since Mark Twain was still writing.

Representative Charles W. Whalen of Massachusetts asked the obvious question: "Is it merely a coincidence that this bill is brought out the day before consideration of the pay raise bill?" The bill's floor manager — Stephen J. Solarz of New York — responded: "We of course wanted to make sure that this matter received the deliberation it required." Um Hmm.

LATER CONGRESSMAN Solarz, whom I hereby nominate for this year's Oscar for righteous indignation, was able to tell his colleagues with equal credibility that "it would be politically obscene for the Congress of the United States to get two pay raises in the course of one year." Voting down one undeserved raise to save another would appear to be obscene enough, and sly to boot.

Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey, who sounds like everybody's Aunt Agatha on these occasions, put it plain: "We're not fooling anybody. We're not fooling the public. The cynicism with which we are regarded is only strengthened by actions like this."

Then there is Tip O'Neill, Speaker of the House and possibly the only Good Ole Boy in Congress from Massachusetts. Speaker O'Neill threatened the House with a thousand lawsuits if it dared hold back $12,900 a year from the members in this appropriation bill. Said it simply couldn't be done. So much for the House's fabled power of the purse.

IT WAS GOOD ole Tip who in a final peroration depicted the plight of those members of Congress who had to maintain children in college while getting only $44,600 a year and the fringe benefits of a maharajah. "Do the decent thing," he implored his colleagues, "and do not vote for a reduction in pay at this time." Made you want to cry. Sure enough his colleagues did as Tip had asked — not the decent thing, but to keep on collecting their extra $12,900 per.

Jim Wright, the majority leader, had a great defense for grabbing, too. He figured that if congressional salaries had been adjusted for the cost of living, all the congressmen would be getting $70,000 by now instead of a piddling $57,500. This of course is not only to ignore all the fringes but to accept the base price for congressional services as justified.

Nor did Congressman Wright give undue attention to another question of equity here: Who ought to bear the burden of the inflationary rise in the cost of living — those who approve government budgets or the ordinary taxpayer?

WRIGHT'S SALLIES against the News Media (that's high-toned for what used to be called Them Lyin' Newspapers) drew a genial reception from this congregation: distinguished members of the House hooted and booed at the mention of the inky wretches who dared bring congressional salaries (and their precipitous rise) to the public's attention.

If a congressman's pay had kept pace with salaries in the News Media, said Wright, he would now be drawing $70,550 — $72,550 if it had kept pace with the pay of blue-collar workers. Which goes to show the impressive feats one can accomplish by emphasizing percentages and ignoring, again, the difference in base pay. Anybody who thinks reporters are overpaid might try borrowing a ten-spot off one. Or try asking the typical working man if he would like to exchange salaries (not to mention perks) with his congressman.

While some congressmen were comparing their state of penury to the salaries drawn by even No. 2 corporate execs, one of their number — William L. Armstrong — noted that a congressman's pay even before the last high rise was three times the national average, twice that of college professors, and three to four times that of the governors of 35 of the states — which proves mainly that both sides can play this comparison game. The more relevant consideration would seem to be the quality of the work done and the duty of public servants, particularly those in charge of making crucial economic decisions, to set an example in inflationary times.

CONGRESS HAS SET an example, all right, but not a wholesome one. The Dickensian circumstances of the actual vote, as described by Mary Russell of the Washington Post, were the stuff of low spectacle: Scores of members loitered around the floor of the House and in the cloakroom until enough votes had been cast to save their pay raises before venturing forth to cast their own nobly against. Even then, they had to make their way around members of the Democratic leadership in the House who "physically blocked the space around the table in the well of the House in case members tried to change their votes . . ."

It was a scene that called out for a Henry Adams or a Mark Twain. Each in his own way knew what needed to be said on such occasions. But most Americans today will probably just grunt and go on. The cynicism has gone too deep.

How did your congressman vote on this issue? The answer might be of some interest to the taxpayers, particularly to any who have children in college and who can't raise their sala-

(Note: Of the two Northwest suburban congressmen, U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane R-12th, voted against the pay raise. U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, voted for it.)

14-year-old proposes better bus route

letters to the editor

Letters must be signed, and no letters will be published anonymously. Letters are subject to condensation, and a maximum length of 300 words is recommended. Direct your mail to the Fence post, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

This letter is being written in response to the article in your newspaper concerning the Woodfield bus line being run by the Regional Transportation Authority and North Suburban Mass Transit District, on Saturday, June 18. It may be too late to remedy the problem, since the bus line has started, but I just wanted to bring it to the public eye.

The problem? It's the route. Exact wording taken from the article states "The suburbs which will be served include Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg." But actually if you carefully examine the route you will see it only serves Des Plaines and that's about it. You see, the bus travels through downtown Des Plaines but then turns on Golf Road and only touches the southern tips of the other towns. A resident living in the other towns mentioned would either have to take a car (then why not ride the whole way), ride a bike (what are you going to do with your bike when you get on the bus), or walk (isn't the bus service supposed to save you the hassle of walking in the summer sun) to get to Golf Road.

Being a 14-year-old kid, when I first read about this service I thought it was a great idea and would gladly have paid the 50 cent fee instead of asking my parents to readjust their schedules just because I needed to go to Woodfield. But now I can't even get to the bus when the purpose of the bus service is to get to me.

The logical route if they want to serve all towns conveniently would be to reroute down Northwest Highway, taking you through the downtown areas of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, and then turning on Euclid and turning left on Wilke and then going to Kirchoff and turning right and then driving to the tollway and south to Woodfield, this taking you right through downtown Rolling Meadows and providing the majority of the people the convenience of this helpful service. I hope the RTA and the SMTD will seriously consider changing their route for both the money and to help the citizens of these towns. That's what it's for, isn't it?

He says farmland must be saved

A few weeks past, I wrote to you regarding my concern of the encroachment of agribusiness corporations into the agricultural field, especially land speculation. The U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics substantiate that these agribusiness corporations have increased farmland acreage purchases, especially in high yield states such as Florida, Texas and California.

It is obvious that much of our fertile farmland is becoming occupied by homesites and pavement as our urban development stretches in all directions. A few decades past launched the beginning of the movement of the people from the cities to suburban areas. This resulted in the abandonment of the city and the indiscriminate use of rich farmland for housing, highways and industrial parks.

As industrial complexes and the population increase in the existing suburbs, the trend of the people is to seek "open territory" for homesites on the outer fringe of greater metropolitan areas, thus contributing to more and more land becoming non-agricultural. This pattern has to be curbed. Somewhere along the way, there must be some way to make certain that land is used in the way that best serves the people. We cannot continue to allow rich, fertile agricultural lands to be used inefficiently since this land is needed to sustain life of the expanding population in this country.

It is imperative that local, state and federal governments unify standards for land utilization. At the local government level urban growth must be directed towards less productive lands. Greater collaboration between communities is required on a regional basis to accomplish a suitable plan of land-use. Both the state and federal governments must develop and pass legislation that will preserve fertile farmland and reinforce similar local ordinances. It may be necessary that legislation be passed that offers a cut in property tax to keep farmland in production. This problem must be resolved soon since good farmland is disappearing at a rapid pace, yet the need for fertile farmland grows even faster. Our government (all levels) is charged with the general welfare and must find a way to make certain that land is used in a way that best serves the people.

'Poor benefit from abortion ban'

The worn out argument that cutting off funds for welfare abortions lets the rich have something the poor can't have reminds us of the story of the man who found a fly in his soup and showed it to his friend. "That isn't fair," his friend complained. "I didn't get a fly in my soup."

What is this "gift" the rich are able to afford that the poor may now be deprived of? Essentially it is a contract put out on one's own child. It is a so-called right to end the life of one's son or daughter for the mother's convenience and the doctor's gain.

It is elective surgery carrying with it a 10 per cent chance of permanent sterility and a 15 per cent chance of serious complications resulting in future miscarriages (Wynn Report). It is a 100 per cent chance of psychological damage resulting from taking a human life (Julius Fogel, M.D.).

And what does it say to a poor woman to offer her a bounty in the form of a tax free abortion to get rid of her child? What does it do to her self-esteem to be told that whatever she can produce is such a burden that society will pay her to get rid of it?

That is the fly in the soup the abortion crowd wants to bestow upon the poor. Perhaps the poor don't want it. And obviously the Illinois taxpayers don't want to pay for it. And now the United States Supreme Court has said they don't have to.

U.S. commodity trading laws a sham

Watch on Washington

Federal laws and regulations on commodity trading appear on the surface to be adequate to protect the public from the manipulations of dishonest brokers and commission houses.

Daily reports are required on the status of each customer's account. Reports also are made on a daily basis to the commodity exchange on daily settlement sheets on liquidated sales and on daily recapitulation sheets on unliguidated accounts.

In addition, commodity exchanges, such as the Chicago Board of Trade, must keep a running cash journal on these reports for reconstruction of trading to minimize the possibility of individual commodity traders being fleeced by the bookkeeping of a dishonest or careless commission house.

BUT, THE LONG-pending case of veteran commodity trader Bernard Rosee demonstrates how the laws and regulations on record-keeping can be effectively nullified by official illegality and by foot-dragging inaction by federal officials as well as the Chicago Board of Trade.

For more than 15 years, Rosee, now 79 years old, has been frustrated in his efforts to get the Chicago Board of Trade and the now defunct Baggot and Morrison commission house to produce the records they are legally required to keep and retain.

He received little or no help from the old Commodity Exchange Authority or the more recently created reform agency — the Commodity Futures Trading Commission — in his efforts to pry loose these basic records.

THE DISHONESTY of the Baggot and Morrison operation is now established beyond question by the Agriculture Dept. which found the commission house to be in violation of the law in its handling of certain customer accounts over a two-year period.

Although the Baggot and Morrison firm was put out of business for these and other unlawful practices, the members of that firm — James Baggot and Donald Morrison — have continued as members in good standing of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Board of Trade ousted Rosee from a seat on the Chicago Board on the complaint of Baggot and Morrison that he owed them approximately $28,000.

When the initial Baggot and Morrison claim was filed against him in 1959, Rosee was shocked because he believed the commission house through which he was trading owed him approximately $1 million.

CONFIDENT THAT the records required by law would prove his case, Rosee agreed to a hearing before the Chicago Board of Trade arbitration committee if he would be provided all of the required records.

But, Rosee's repeated demands for the records were rejected by the arbitration committee in its closed hearing. While Rosee was denied the services of a lawyer, and the right to subpoena the records and witnesses to try to establish his case, the arbitration committee gave the Baggot and Morrison commission house every advantage, including representation by a lawyer who was a member of the board of directors of the Chcago Board.

Rosee went to Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen, but refusal to produce records by Baggot and Morrison, the Chicago Board of Trade and the Commodity Exchange Authority delayed disposition of that case by Judge Cohen until 1972.

JUDGE COHEN finally found that the arbitration commission hearing before the Chicago Board of Trade was devoid of proper due process and was a sham and a fraud, but that Rosee's evidence fell short of establishing a conspiracy by the Board of Trade and officials of the Agriculture Dept.

Judge Cohen entered a $750,000 judgement for Rosee against the Baggot and Morrison firm and found the summary accepted by the Chicago Board's arbitration commission was not a correct representation of Rosee's dealing with Baggot and Morrison.

The Illinois Appeals Court, disregarding the record of findings by lower courts on false and fabricated records, reversed Judge Cohen, and upheld the propriety and fairness of the Chicago Board of Trade arbitration hearing.

Judge Cohen, obviously rankled by the Illinois Appeal Court adoption of the arguments of lawyers for the Chicago Board of Trade, now has permitted Rosee to come into court with new motions to obtain the records of commodity trading required to be kept by federal law.

Even a casual look at the Rosee case demonstrates that the record-keeping requirements of the law are a sham if they are not honestly and aggressively administered. That record indicates that only a fool would have any faith that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission or the Chicago Board of Trade would protect him against frauds by the commission houses that are members of the Chicago Board.

It is understandable that Congress would give the Commodity Futures Trading Commission several months to try to get its house in order, but a depth probe of the regulation of the commodity markets that do business totaling more than $500 billion a year is way past due.

Surviving the 4th without a fifth

Dorothy Meyer

When I got back to work after the long holiday weekend and people asked, "Did you have a nice Fourth," I said, "Aarrghhh," or "Buzz off," depending upon whether it was a boss or a co-worker asking.

(INever tell a boss to buzz off, but I can get by with an arrrgghhh now and then.)

Probably it was only the heat, but I'd just as soon forget last weekend.

SOME PEOPLE survived the Fourth with a fifth, but I can't drink that much in hot weather and by the Fourth-and-a-halfth I was so full of iced tea I could hardly wait to get back to the coffee machine at work.

That HAD to be the heat.

Furthermore, I spent part of the holiday weekend watching the Cubs' double disaster in my own un-air-conditioned pad when I could have been at a cool neighbor's beer bash. I also made bean soup and went to see "Star Wars."

The bean soup was because I fixed a ham for the weekend and according to my late great mother, a ham bone means bean soup and don't argue.

BUT I CAN'T stand bean soup in hot weather.

I also can't stand standing in line to see a movie.

Everybody knows that it's a three-hour wait to see "Star Wars" so my son, his wife and I got smart and went to the midnight show. When we only had to stand in line for an hour-and-a-half.

I guess the movie was as great as its reviews, but I had to sit funny to see past the lady in front of me and sitting funny makes my neck crooked which in turn causes a very bad headache.

AT FIRST I didn't notice the headache because I was so fascinated by the lady — I never saw such big hair in all my life. Then, two-thirds of the way through the movie, she gave a soft moan and suddenly departed. Apparently her hair finally got too much for her because when she left she had both hands to her head and was trying to correct a severe starboard list.

It was then that I realized I had a horrendous headache and when the cute little robot, R 2-D 2 got a blast from the bad guys, I knew just how he felt. The audience moaned in sympathy for little Arty Two and I moaned in sympathy for me.

By the time we got home and I had doctored my headache it was 4:30 a.m.

AND THEN THE blinkety-blank birds started chirping and if birds could bellow that would be a better word than "chirp."

Nevertheless I survived which is more than I expect to do this weekend — the annual department picnic is this afternoon.

Taiwan should not harm U.S.-China relationship

by PAT M. HOLT

The departure of Leonard Woodcock to be the new head of the United States Liaison Office in Peking and the August visit to China of Sec. of State Cyrus Vance provide a welcome opportunity for moving U.S. policy toward the People's Republic of China off dead center. It has remained there ever since the Shanghai communique of President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai in 1972.

The difficulty is, and has been, Taiwan. But there is no reason this should continue to be so; indeed, it has already continued far too long.

The position of the Peking Chinese — stated publicly and accepted by the United States in the Nixon-Chou communique — is that mainland China and Taiwan are part of one country and that the means of uniting is a matter to be determined by the Chinese. The mainland Chinese have been unwilling to commit themselves as to what their means might be; specifically, they have been unwilling to renounce the use of force, but neither, except for a brief period about a year ago, have they insisted on it.

THE CURRENT Peking line is that when and how unification takes place is a Chinese matter and is not a factor in U.S.-Chinese relations. This sounds like a way of putting it off. It ought to be enough for the United States, especially when it is coupled with the fact that the Chinese on both sides of the Taiwan Straits are well aware that a violent end to the Taiwan question would be a most unsettling event in the Western Pacific and East Asia and would raise the most serious questions for U.S. policy.

Otherwise, the process of normalizing relations between Washington and Peking has been hung up over the slowness with which Washington has moved to disentangle itself from Taiwan. In the Shanghai communique and subsequently, the Chinese conditions of normalization have been the withdrawal of the U.S. military presence in Taiwan, an end to the U.S.-Republic of China (Taiwan) mutual defense treaty, and an end to U.S.-Republic of China (Taiwan) diplomatic relations.

None of these, taken by itself, seems unreasonable, and the U.S. military presence has, in fact, been reduced by more than three-fourths. The mutual defense treaty, which came into force in 1955, does not provide that it is effective in perpetuity; on the contrary, it provides by its own terms for either party to terminate it on one year's notice.

One is hardly welshing on a commitment if he gets out of it by following the procedures it prescribes. Contracts are terminated every day on this basis. And if the U.S. military presence and the defense treaty were settled, the matter of diplomatic relations could easily and naturally fall into place. The British and Japanese, among others, have found ways to maintain official representation in Taiwan while having ambassadors accredited in Peking.

THE SHANGHAI communique of 1972 was followed in 1973 by the Vietnamese peace agreements, and it was argued that the United States ought not to inject a further unsettling factor in the Far East by disturbing its relations with Taiwan at that time. The argument was repeated following the total collapse of non-Communist Indo-China in 1975. It will no doubt be heard again in 1977 in the form that the U.S. ought not to withdraw from Taiwan at the same time it is withdrawing, or talking about withdrawing, from South Korea.

The White House may be particularly receptive to this argument in view of the unexpected buzz-saw of opposition it has encountered in Congress to its Korean policy.

But there will always be something happening in the Far East to provide an excuse for postponing action with respect to China. As a matter of fact, a better case can be made for withdrawing from Taiwan than from Korea.

(THANKS TO A hundred miles of water, Taiwan is better able to defend itself without American help than is South Korea. Withdrawal from Taiwan would pay immediate dividends in terms of U.S. relations with the People's Republic; the benefits accruing from withdrawal from Korea are more indirect.)

Further, if the U.S. is going to withdraw from Korea, that in itself is all the more reason to get on better speaking terms with the Chinese; there might come a time when the U.S. would wish them to restrain their friends in North Korea.

But quite apart from all of this, the promising initiative which President Nixon took in 1972 ought not to be allowed to wither longer on the vine.

Money to burn? Mansions up for grabs

Hunting's fun if it's make-believe

by ELEANOR RIVES

Have you ever been househunting aristocrat style?

It's a fun game, a chance to play out your fantasies.

"Pretend," said the Voice, "pretend you are going to buy a house and money is no object. Say you have maybe $250,000 to spend. Look around. See what you could buy."

My thoughts raced. A colonial mansion with two-story pillars? A gentleman's horse farm, its borders marked off with whiter-than-white fences. A rich, rambling contemporary, all gleaming glass and mellowed wood, sprawling on acreage purposely left in its natural state?

Mentally I began counting off top drawer developments on my fingers. Offhand, excuse the word play, I could think of only three.

STARTING AT the bottom rung, pricewise, there is Lake Barrington Shores where the condominiums and townhouses (eventually there will be 1,370 of them) can run as high as $150,000. That's for a carpeted, air-conditioned three-bedroom model with library, full walk-out basement, three fireplaces, 2½ baths and attached two-car garage.

In modified California style, its cedar exterior and cedar shake roof are practically maintenance free. The cluster type arrangement of buildings occupies only 18 per cent of the land, and the land, bless it, contains a 100-acre spring fed lake, a 35-acre nature preserve and an 18-hole golf course.

LAWN CARE, snow (ugh) removal, use of boats, homeowners' insurance, refuse removal, water and all recreational facilities except golf are covered by a monthly assessment.

If that isn't enough, listen to this: One of the 360 owners caught a 7½-pound bass last week!

Sounds great, Lake Barrington Shores, but you're just not expensive enough for me.

On to Inverness where the living is easy, the village ethereal, and the inhabitants invisible. As one resident said, "Just pretend we're not here."

Lying between Palatine and Barrington, Inverness sprang from humble beginnings. It was farm property until 1938 when an enterprising developer bought it up and began carefully planning homesites. About a dozen years ago, it became a village, and since then has annexed other properties to it.

TO BECOME AN Invernesian takes a bit of doing. Homesites must be at least one acre and one's building plans must meet specific architectural requirements. Other deed restrictions forbid anything that might be considered a nuisance, anything that smacks of commercialism, etc. I suspect Inverness housewives never hang out their laundry.

Architecture includes English Tudor, Southern Colonial, French Country, Williamsburg, Garrison, other traditional types and a very few contemporaries.

The cost? "Yes, $250,000 would buy a handsome home in a handsome location — it wouldn't even take $250,000," said a representative of a developer.

I FOUND ONE I liked. It was one of the few contemporaries. Of moss green wood and brick with expanses of glass and a handsplit shake roof, it hugs a wooded hillside that slopes at one end to a lower level garage. Neither stark nor cold, it has a charming Swiss feeling about it.

It isn't priced. It isn't for sale.

On to the crossroads of Long Grove, where people in search of nostalgia swarm the streets like ants in search of sugar. A sales associate from Crossroads Realty adroitly maneuvered her car and the two of us into the hinterlands.

We cruised through Long Grove, Kildeer, Farmington, Boschome and Country Club Estates, through areas where three-car garages are the norm and through some areas where three-acre lots are the minimum.

HOMES RUN AS high as $400,000, sometimes because of the value of the land. Colonials, French Provincials, Spanish haciendas, Southwest abodes, hillside ranches and contemporaries dot the landscape. Some have separate summer houses or pool houses, stables, even indoor arenas.

One long low contemporary that caught my eye was flanked by a swimming pool and a summer house, and, at the bottom of the hill, its own aerated natural pond. The Realtor described its indoor swimming pool with closed circuit TV, its sauna and separate dressing rooms for men and women, its pool area Pullman kitchen, its huge family room and full recreation room on the lower level, running the length of the house.

FOR GOOD MEASURE, she threw in its three fireplaces, two heating and two air conditioning systems and punctuated the whole description with $350 doorknobs.

"You could entertain 150 people comfortably in that house," she said, at the same time estimating that such a house might sell for about $375,000 today.

It wasn't for sale, but that didn't matter. The price tag was over my head. As were the 19 three-acre unimproved lots now selling (actually selling) for $75,000 each in another Long Grove subdivision.

Besides, I wanted trees and a lake. She threw up her hands "Everybody wants trees and a lake!" she exclaimed.

Aerating lawn a sound practice

George Creed

It's your landscape

Oxygen is absorbed by the roots as well as by the leaves of plants. When soil, for one reason or another, is lacking in oxygen plants growing in the soil suffer and will die if conditions are not improved.

Your lawn is made of millions of individual grass plants each requiring sunlight, nutrients, moisture and oxygen. You can furnish nutrients in the form of fertilizers and moisture and usually there is enough sunshine for plant growth, but soil oxygen is an element that depends on the condition of the soil. The presence of oxygen in the root zone of grass is not a problem if you have loose, porous soil, a characteristic of sandy soils, but if your soil is heavy or is poorly drained you could have a problem.

Heavy traffic on your lawn tends to pack down the soil. As a consequence free passage of oxygen into your soil is hampered. What can you do to change your soil so that your grass receives adequate amounts of oxygen? The answer is to aerate. Golf course managers long ago recognized the benefits of aeration and have been aerating the grass on their heavily used fairways as a regular part of maintenance.

CROSS SECTION A shows grass as it grows in your lawn. Section B illustrates one method of aerating a lawn. Hollow steel tubes, like this attached to a rotating mechanism (sketch C) plunge into the ground and soil is forced up through them and deposited above grade. The hole left by each of these tubes allows air to circulate into the root zone and also permits the easier absorption of water.

Sketch D illustrates at larger scale the hollow steel tube and the small arrows indicate the direction the soil plug takes as it is forced through the tube. Another method of aeration employs a series of steel spikes (E) mounted on a revolving drum powered by a gasoline driven engine.

You can rent aerators at many garden centers and at stores that specialize in the rental of tools of various kinds. Aerating your lawn at least once a year is sound practice.

Apartment site purchased

The sale of a 12-acre parcel of land near the intersection of Bloomingdale Road and Army Trail Road in Bloomingdale, where 186 low-rise rental apartments are planned, has been announced by Hoffman Properties, Inc., a subsidiary of The Hoffman Group, Inc.

According to Bruce McLennan, vice president of Hoffman Properties, the land was sold to the Willow Glen Development Co. for the construction of the rental complex. Price was not disclosed.

The units are being built in clusters of attached six-unit buildings, which will be offered for sale to investors at asking prices in the $170,000 range. Sales information and rental applications are available in a temporary office on the site. First occupancies are expected in the fall.

Crop failure? Causes are many

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Pity the poor gardener who breaks his back all spring only to experience frustrating failures. Here are a few tips that may shed some light on the reasons for possible crop disappointments you may be experincing.:

Getting bitter radishes? Too much heat or lack of water is the problem. Harvested after hot weather begins, turnips, too, will be bitter.

Question: I planted some of that decorative pampas grass and it never came up. Why?

Pampas grass, like other grasses, has to be kept evenly moist all during germinaion. If allowed to dry out, the seeds won't sprout. Did you ever notice how crabgrass and other such pests need no encouragement, but the grasses you really care about have to be pampered to sprout, just as if they were babies?

QUESTION: THERE are all kinds of flowers on my zucchini but no fruit. How come?

Squash produce both male and female flowers on the same plant. Sometimes the male flowers will appear first. Be patient and both will form. The male flowers can be distinguished by their powdery pollen, the female flowers have a green area at the base of the flowers, a baby "fruit." If there are not enough bees around to pollinate them, you may have to play bee and pick some of the male blossoms in the morning and transfer the powdery yellow pollen to the sticky stigma in the center of the female flowers.

IF THE HOT WEATHER is keeping your garden at a standstill and water is at a premium, go out and buy a bale of straw. Apply it between the rows and around established plants, but don't smother them. Trying to cope with uneven soil temperatures frustrates plants' growth. Mulching with straw will cool the ground, keep in moisture, hold down weeds. You will want to avoid the use of plastic mulch in the summer, as it heats the soil temperature even more.

Question: I've got weeds in my rock garden that are impossible to pull by hand. What should I do?

Heat a kettle of water until it is boiling vigorously, then pour it over the weeds, being careful not to hit the flowers — bingo, no more weeds!

With hot weather suffocating us, it's interesting to note that plants dry out faster in a window box painted a dark color then one painted white or pastel. The lighter colors tend to reflect hot sun rays.

IF YOUR TOMATO plants turn yellow and die just as they are bearing, it is probably a disease called Fusarium or Verticilium wilt. Planting a disease-resistant strain of tomatoes next year, like Big Girl Hybrid VF or Better Boy VFN, will eliminate these problems.

uestion: My tomatoes are cracking. Any suggestions?

You're probably not staking your tomatoes. Staking cuts down on the incidence of cracking. Metal rods, instad of wooden stakes, promote plant growth.

If the carrot seeds you planted are comi#g up in bunches, don't try to save the thinnings to replant them. It will only cause "forked tongues." This holds true of all the root crops that are planted from seed. It's best to thin carrots while they are still small — I use a tweezers — to avoid disturbing the roots of the others. Next year, take your time getting those tiny seeds in the ground.

ZUCCHINI SQUASH have male flowers, left, and female flowers, right, on the same plants. Male flowers may appear first, but both will eventually bloom in healthy squash.

Don't let the garden get you down. It may be of some comfort to know that even the pros have their failures — they just keep them under wraps.

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

Most people who withdraw from active employment do not want to retreat from the human race, either in property holding or from neighbors and friends. This common-sense home fits into any retirement plan because its modest size relates to a reduced income budget yet isn't a one-room cubicle.

Retirement shouldn't mean that your kitchen must now be placed in your living room, or that you must now learn to eat off the arm of a chair. But it does mean you can now get along with less room, which also means a little less housework and other large house chores.

THE COUNTRY cottage type of house has always appealed to the senior citizen and here, the architect has used the simple but unique idea of projecting the front vestibule and window seat. This has the effect of making the main body of the house appear to be much smaller than it really is. The balance of front elevation is made up of two small side wings which add width without destroying the illusion of being a cottage.

This is a 1½ story expansion attic type house. It is just about the least expensive method of enclosing more living space than need be finished at one time — an important consideration if resale is a future possibility. The high roofed expansion attic space on the second floor can either be finished in the rough or it could double as a studio if the owner is so inclined. When not in use this space can be closed off by a first floor door. Even heating and cooling can be an on-and-off deal.

The first floor plan is simple, efficient and step saving. It has a side service entrance which can lead directly to the basement. The kitchen is large and provides plenty of space for all requirements. It contains the usual major appliances that can usually be fitted into a smaller space, but here the balance of facilities are used for additional cabinets.

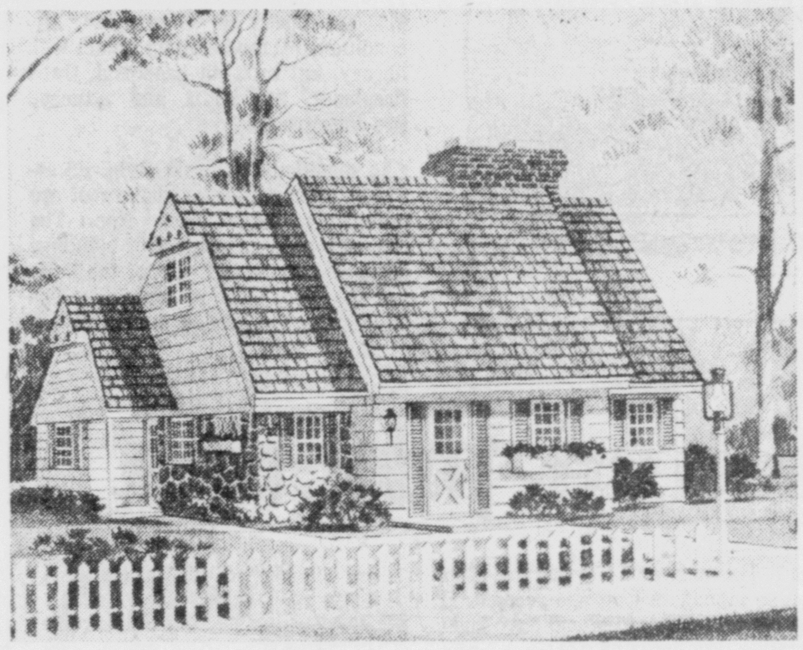

A MODEST sized dining room suits day-to-day needs. In-line wide arches in the dining and living rooms offer space for a lengthened table to project into the hall or living room if required.

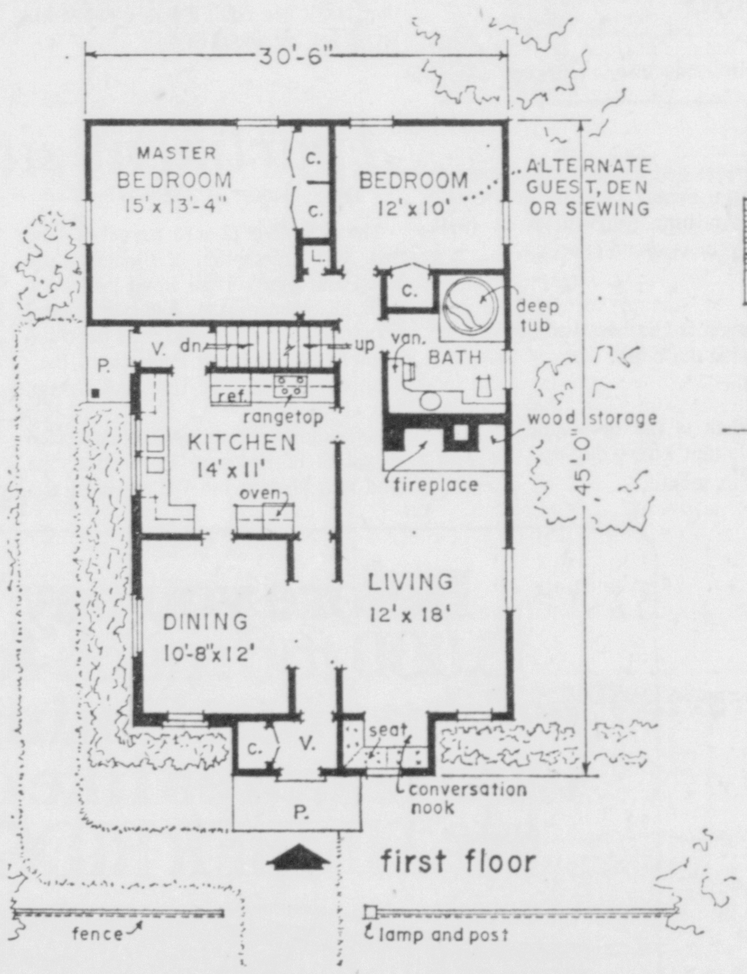

The living room is of sufficient size and has a log-burning fireplace with an adjoining wood storage bin. Three windows provide good natural lighting, but one is of particular interest. It is in a recessed conversation nook with built-in seats.

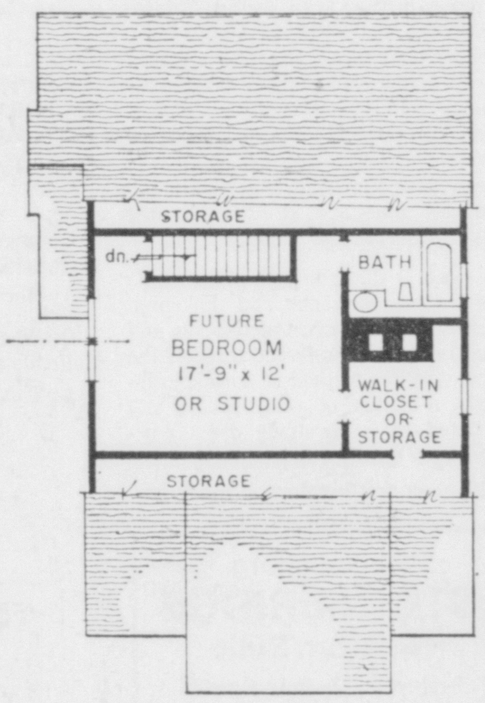

The bathroom has some novel features. A deep soaking tub — an Oriental style new to Americans which provides much more relaxed bathing than the common bathtub. One can stand in it or sit on one of the two step seats. An all-in-one piece sink and vanity top is also provided and covers two walls.

Exterior materials used are: wood double hung windows, horizontal wood siding and stone veneer and thick butt roof shingles. A typical country style picket fence is suggested in front.

New homes offered in Hanover Park

"There are very few places left within driving or commuting distance of Chicago that can boast a true country setting," says Dennis Taheny, area vice president for U.S. Home. "But Woodlake Trails is just such a place. We're surrounded by farms and forests. Our location has attracted second and third homebuyers who thought they had what they wanted when they originally bought in the western suburbs."

U.S. Home is presently offering four models of single family homes, priced from $47,490 up, in a new section of Woodlake Trails, Hanover Park. The property borders the lake.

The Timberland, priced from $59,990 has a 2,339 square foot living aarea with three or four bedrooms, two or three full baths and a two-car garage as standard. The Timberland ... is an ideal home for extended families," said Taheny, "it gives the grandparents the privacy of the lower floor to themselves."
to include two walk-in closets, a fourth bedroom with a walk-in closet, a third full bath and family room with optional corner fireplace. There is also room for a separate utility room.

The Birchwood, with 1,548 square feet of living area, is a tri-level available with either three or four bedrooms and as many as two and one-half baths. It has an attached one-car garage which can be expanded for two cars and is priced from $51,990.

The Creekside is a mid-level home with 1,846 square feet of living space. It is available with two or three baths and three or four bedrooms. A family room and large wooden deck are other options. The Creekside is priced from $57,900.

THE FARMINGTON is ranch-style with 1,128 square feet of living space. Priced from $47,490, it has three bedrooms and one full bath. The home features a large country kitchen and the master bedroom has a walk-in closet as well as a wall of closets. There is a main floor laundry room in the bedroom wing.

All of the Woodlake Trails single family homes have gas-fired forced air heating systems, glass-lined gas hot water heater and R-19 insulation in the ceilings and R-11 in the walls.

Smoke detectors, outside front and rear electrical outlets and fully improved, sodded front lots and treed parkways are also included. U.S. Home homes are all covered by the 10-year Home Owners Warranty insurance.

Woodlake Trails is on Army Trail Road, 6½ miles west of Route 53.

FLOP-OVER CUSHION arms and plump back pillows on Simmons Hide-a-bed carry out the soft theme of this energy-saving room. Baskets and woven blinds add to the feeling.

Cut the stress factor

Carolyn Murray

Your home

Top priority around home base these days goes to squeezing extra energy out of existing lifestyles. And that conservation effort can be expanded to include human energy as well as savings in those precious fossil fuels.

One of the reasons we have become dependent on sophisticated, and energy wasteful, gadgetry at home is that we get just plain tired of performing repetitive jobs. There are also the stress factors that arise when we don't have the right accoutrements for special, unexpected happenings. You know the ones . . . the drop-in friend or relative toting an overnight bag . . . a last-minute babysitting session . . . or a family illness. Whether the reason is a need for isolation or pure questing, we do need ways to cope.

ONE WAY TO avoid some of that home-base stress is to prethink furnishings so they respond easily to instant need. That way we can cut back our loss of personal energy.

The room shown today makes a few good points on human-energy saving. For one thing, all of the accessories are "soft" ware. What does that mean? Well, baskets and woven objects take the place of typical hard surface objects. Near the fireplace there's a tall round basket with a lid. That replaces the usual storage chest or trunk or foot locker we often see in a guest-type room. In this case the bed pillows are nicely stashed in that basket. Plants are all in baskets and even the ottoman is woven of rush. So when people who are unfamiliar with your surroundings are visting, they are not so concerned about hitting or scratching fine surfaces.

The owner gains, too. At witching hour, when that attractive sofa converts for sleep, the furnishings are light in weight and easy to manipulate. No backbreakers here. Just kick the ottoman if you feel like it! No harm done!

THE SOFA IS one of Simmons' Hide-A-Bed models, called Alpha. And it picks up that soft theme with its flopover arm padding and plump pillows. The fabric has an unusual thumbprint-looking pattern that probably is an exploded view of woodgraining.

Aha! There's also another good idea — a mirror for guest primping. But in this case it's a handsome carved one that doesn't have to match anything.

More grass is seen at the windows where woven blinds and wood shutters share the sun-filtering chores. The sofa side table adds another grace note for a guest, since it's a good height for either reading or stitchery.

The final advantage is the size of the sofa in this smallish room. Scaling forms down to fit the square footage may actually become the nicest form of conversation . . . it's visually satisfying and saves the spirit from feeling pressed for space!

Weddings

Helen Naber – Timothy J. McCarthy

Two graduates of Palatine High School, Helen M. Naber and Timothy J. McCarthy, were married June 18 in St. Thomas of Villanova Church. The noon service featured a mint and forest green color scheme.

Helen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Naber and Timothy the son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. McCarthy, all of Palatine.

Helen chose a white silk organza and lace gown with a chapel veil for the double ring ceremony and carried a cascade of gardenias and stephanotis. Her maid of honor, Timothy's sister Eileen, was dressed in a mint green knit jersey gown and held a nosegay of white carnations, yellow roses and green baby's breath.

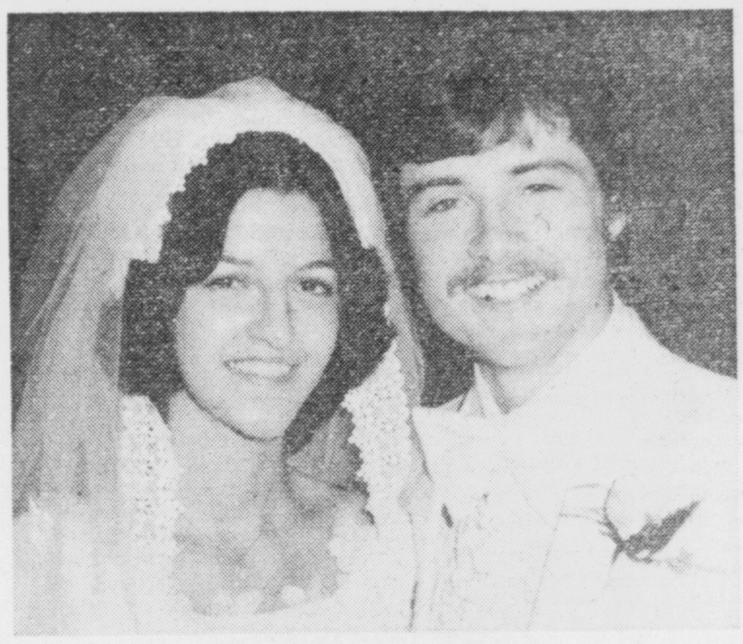

BRIDESMAIDS, gowned like the maid of honor and carrying similar bouquet, were Donna McGregor, Palatine; Martha Naber, the bride's sister from Glendale Heights; and Colleen McCarthy, the groom's sister. Tiny Naber, the bride's sister, attended as junior bridesmaid.

Timothy's best man was Kevin Nowlin, Palatine. His other attendants were Mike Bourbon, Palatine; John Sattel, Northglenn, Colo.; and the groom's two brothers, Brian and Martin.

Ushers were Tim Hellyer, Des Plaines, Steve Carter and Denise Miller, Palatine, and Terri Bramlett, Rolling Meadows.

A reception for 200 guests followed the ceremony at the Sheraton Inn Walden. The couple then left for a weekend honeymoon at Lake Lawn and are spending the remainder of the summer as counselors in a summer camp in northern Michigan. They will return to Des Plaines in September.

Helen attended Harper College and Trinity College and will study psychology at George Williams College in September. Timothy is enrolled at Harper to become a paramedic.

Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Bardaji

Kathleen Ward–Tony Bardaji

Meeting on a Caribbean cruise three years ago, Kathleen Anne Ward of Arlington Heights and Antonio Bardaji of Barcelona, Spain, fell in love and were married this past May 28 in Our Lady of the Wayside Church.

Kathy, daughter of Mrs John E. Ward, has been a travel consultant for Total Travel, Palatine.

Tony is with the Royal Caribbean Steamship Lines based in Miami, Fla. He is the son of Mrs. Rosita Bardaji y Martin of Barcelona.

FOR THE 11 a.m. double ring wedding service, Kathy's brother Robert gave her in marriage and Tony's mother was present to give her son away. Mrs. David Woodyatt of Arlington Heights was the bride's only attendant and best man was Mario Vargas of Miami. The bride's uncle, Dr. James Conway of Glenview, ushered.

A luncheon followed for 125 guests at Allgauer's Fireside Restaurant. The newlyweds honeymooned in Acapulco, Mexico, and are making their home in Miami.

Kathy is a graduate of Arlington High School and Olson Travel School, Palatine.

Linda Smith – James O. Turney Jr.

A romance that began on a blind date culminated in marriage June 4 for Linda Dian Smith and James O. Turney Jr.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Smith, Arlington Heights, Linda and James, son of Mrs. Marjorie Turney of Palatine and the late James O. Turney, were married in Peace Reformed Church, Mount Prospect. The candlelight, double ring service was held at 7:30 p.m. with a reception following in the garden of the bride's parents where a tent had been set up for the 150 guests.

Linda chose a white chiffon gown with Venise trim for her wedding. Her veil was trimmed in the same lace and was held in place by a lace headpiece. She carried yellow tea roses, stephanotis and carnations with baby's breath.

MAID OF HONOR was her sister, Patricia Ann, who wore light blue chiffon with chiffon cape. In an identical gown was Joan Bynagle of Indianapolis, Ind., bridesmaid. Both had blue picture hats with netting and carried white and blue-tinted daisies.

Donald Turney, Madison, Wis., was his brother's best man, and groomsman was the bride's brother, Gerald. Ushers were Lindsay Gowans, Hanover Park, and the groom's cousin, James Hamilton, Bensenville.

The newlyweds honeymooned at Niagara Falls and at Thousand Islands in Canada, and are now residing in Palatine.

The new Mrs. Turney studied at Indiana State Business College in Indianapolis and is now with Parker-Hannifin Corp., Des Plaines. The groom, a graduate of Palatine High, studied at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, and is with Arlington Ambulance, Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Turney Jr.

Single women's group growing

Single women are a rapidly growing group among the 65 million unattached adult Americans.

The American Council of Life Insurance says the proportion of women ages 25-29 who remain unmarried has increased by more than a third since 1960. The council said the market for "singles" goods and services for them includes not just housing, travel and other clubs and dating services, but also life insurance.

Between 1965-1975, the average amount of ordinary life insurance bought by single women increased 119 per cent, from $3,960 to $8,680. (UPI)

The doctor says

Fluids cause swelling whenever she diets

I am a student and in a year I will be a registered nurse. I am also a mother and am 33 years old.

I have a problem with edema. Under normal circumstances this doesn't happen. but when I diet — I am going to Weight Watchers for the second time in my life — after about the third week on the diet I start waking up all puffy. My eyes are puffy. My fingers are like overstuffed sausages.

Last year this distressed me so much that I gave up the diet with only 13 pounds to go.

No matter what I eat or drink, it happens apparently as a result of the diet. I have tried cutting out all extra sodium but nothing works. As the diet progresses, I become more and more troubled with edema every day.

I also had swelling with my pregnancy but no increase in blood pressure or other problems. This problem makes me feel and look sluggish and I'd love to have it end so I can lose some weight and have done with it. Do you have any suggestions?

Your reaction is apparently more extreme than seen in most people, but retention of fluid while losing weight is fairly common. As the fat tissue is used for energy its breakdown liberates water and carbon dioxide. The water may be retained. Such an individual may not see much change in weight on the scales because of the retention of water. Then suddenly there will be a sudden increase in elimination and the person may even feel washed out and will lose several pounds at once. The cycle may repeat itself again, causing the person to lose weight in plateaus.

If you had persisted past the three-week period, you may have had such a wash-out reaction and had a sudden weight loss.

Since you seem to have an unusual amount of fluid, I would suggest that you simply take a diuretic about once a week to help you rid yourself of the accumulating fluid. Don't be upset about the fluid accumulation. It is a sign that you are losing fat and that is what you want to do. Once you have lost your weight the condition will stop as you stabilize at your new weight.

For some tips on dieting I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Is there any effective exercise or method to get rid of a double chin? I'm full faced and have always had this problem. I'm 26 years old.

Staying lean all over helps prevent a double chin. Some people just have an extra large fat pad under the chin. It is often a family characteristic. There are more fat cells there in these people. Even after having reduced to a sensible level the fat pad stays.

There is no exercise that will change it and you can't accomplish anything with chin straps or other devices.

If it is really bothersome, you can have a plastic surgeon make a small incision underneath the chin, usually along the jaw bone, and remove the fat pad. When done well, the scar is hidden under the jaw bone and is barely visible.

Plum Grove Club's goal $10,000 for paramedics

"Help Save a Life" is the theme of the Plum Grove Club's fund-raising drive to support the paramedic program in the Northwest suburbs.

Businesses and individuals are being asked to contribute to the drive which culminates in a presentation party Saturday, July 16, at the club, located at 400 Park Dr., Palatine.

A goal of $10,000 is set by the club in order to provide a special film training program vital to ongoing educational needs of the paramedics. The project is coordinated by Dr. Stan Zydlo and Doug Gray of Northwest Community Hospital Foundation. Paramedics from the hospital serve residents throughout the Northwest communities.

Those wishing to contribute may send checks to the Plum Grove Club payable to the hospital foundation.

Ask Andy

Most algae reproduces by cell division

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Alicia Accardo, 11, of Barrington Hills, Ill., for her question:

HOW DOES ALGAE GROW?

All algae contain chlorophyll. The plants help to purify the air and water by a process of photosynthesis. Algae are also food for fish and other creatures that live in the water. Some grow best in polluted water and when waste material is dumped into fresh water by man, algae will often increase and upset the natural balance of life in a body of water.

Algae are actually simple organisms that live in ponds, lakes, oceans or rivers. A single one is called an alga.

Some algae are large plants while others are just single cell plants.

One type, called the blue-green algae, takes the form of slippery coatings on rocks along creeks, rivers and lakes. Most of this type reproduce and grow only by cell division.

Other algae, often grouped as brown, green or red, grow and reproduce by cell division although most of them can also reproduce sexually.

One of the most plentiful of the brown algae is found on the shores of oceans in most temperature zones. Called kelp, it can grow to be 200 feet long. Algin, a substance obtained from kelp, has been used in food products and also cosmetics. It was also used at one time as a source for iodine.

Green algae are found in both fresh and salt water with most of them living in lakes and ponds. Large amounts have been known to color an entire lake. For the most part, green algae are microscopic although other species, primarily those found along ocean fronts, can be longer. On many coral beaches green algae consist of long pieces of seaweed filled with lime.

Red algae are found chiefly in subtropical areas and on coral beaches. A few species are found in fresh water. Some of the red algae contain agar, a gelatin-like substance used by scientists to grow bacteria in laboratories.

Some people in Japan use red algae as a food item. It is called nori and it is sold in dry sheets.

Botanists list blue-green algae in the same family as bacteria, but they consider all other types to be plants.

Most blue-green algae can only be seen with a microscope because they are so small. Some of the species have only one cell while others form into strands. Cells of this type of algae lack a distinct nucleus. Besides chlorophyll, they also contain blue or red pigments, the combination often giving them a pinkish, brown or black look.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Brian Medina, 11, of Sioux City, Iowa, for his question:

WHO INVENTED THE SKATE BOARD?

In the 1920s scooters with rubber wheels were popular. In the 1930s came 2 by 4s with one roller skate nailed at the bottom and a steering post — usually a wooden box — set at one end for steering purposes. This vehicle was called a skate coaster.

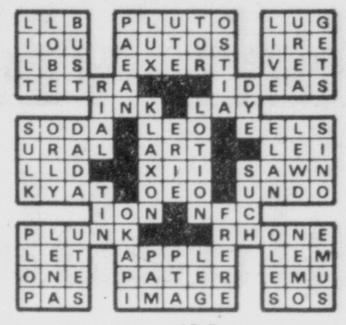

Then in the 1950s, on a day when the ocean surf was very low, a champion surfer by the name of Hobie Alter nailed a skate to a hardwood board and sidewalk surfed down the hills in his Southern California beach town.

Steel wheels were too stiff so he tried clay wheels used in roller rinks — and these didn't last long on pavement. He arranged to have special wheels built and was soon making boards for his pals. It wasn't long before he was manufacturing and selling skateboards — and a new industry was born.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Win at bridge

West bites the bullet

"Quite a play partner," chortled East.

"I guess I was desperate," replied West.

West made the normal opening lead of the five of hearts. East won with the king and returned the suit. South won in dummy, led the queen of clubs and let it ride. West took his king.

Here is where West made the play that received East's approval. He decided there was no future in the heart suit and that the only way to defeat the contract would be to collect three quick spade tricks. So he promptly led his king of spades and continued with the deuce.

South looked long and hard in all directions, finally reached over and played dummy's queen. East took his ace and returned the suit. West made his jack and that was enough.

South really shouldn't have fallen for West's play. If West actually held the ace and king he would have under-led them to start with. On the other hand, there had to be some real merit to the play West made since it did succeed.

Fish viewing valuable tool

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

Ever since the invention of the gold fish bowl, people have been observing the behavior of gill-breathing swimmers.

Aquariums are suitable for limited structure which permits its inhabitants to make homes, seek protection and even get a fresh supply of oxygen pumped into the water on a regular basis.

The obvious bowl and aquarium restrictions are size. It's fine for observing goldfish, guppies or snails. But what about the gamefish populations that fisheren spend endless hours, valuable vacation time and millions of dollars in equipment trying to puruse?

THE MAJORITY of fishermen know very little about their prey. Sure, they know they swim around, hide in rocks and other structure and get hungry occasionally — usually when the fisherman is elsewhere.

But how many anglers have actually watched the fish they stalk? What do they look like in the water when they are not being dragged by a plug or hoisted in a net?

One of the most educational exhibits is at the Milwaukee Zoo in West Allis, Wis. In the fish and reptile house is a man-made lake completely enclosed by glass panels. The underwater vantage point reveals some spectacular secrets about fish lifestyle.

There are virtually no forage fish. The species, native to Wisconsin waters, are all lunkers. There are 10-pound bass, 3-pound crappies, 10-pound walleye, 20-pound northern an 30-pound muskie in addition to a variety of panfish.

A 20-POUND catfish, his fins irregular with age, brushes his barbels against the glass while making a quick swoosch with his tail.

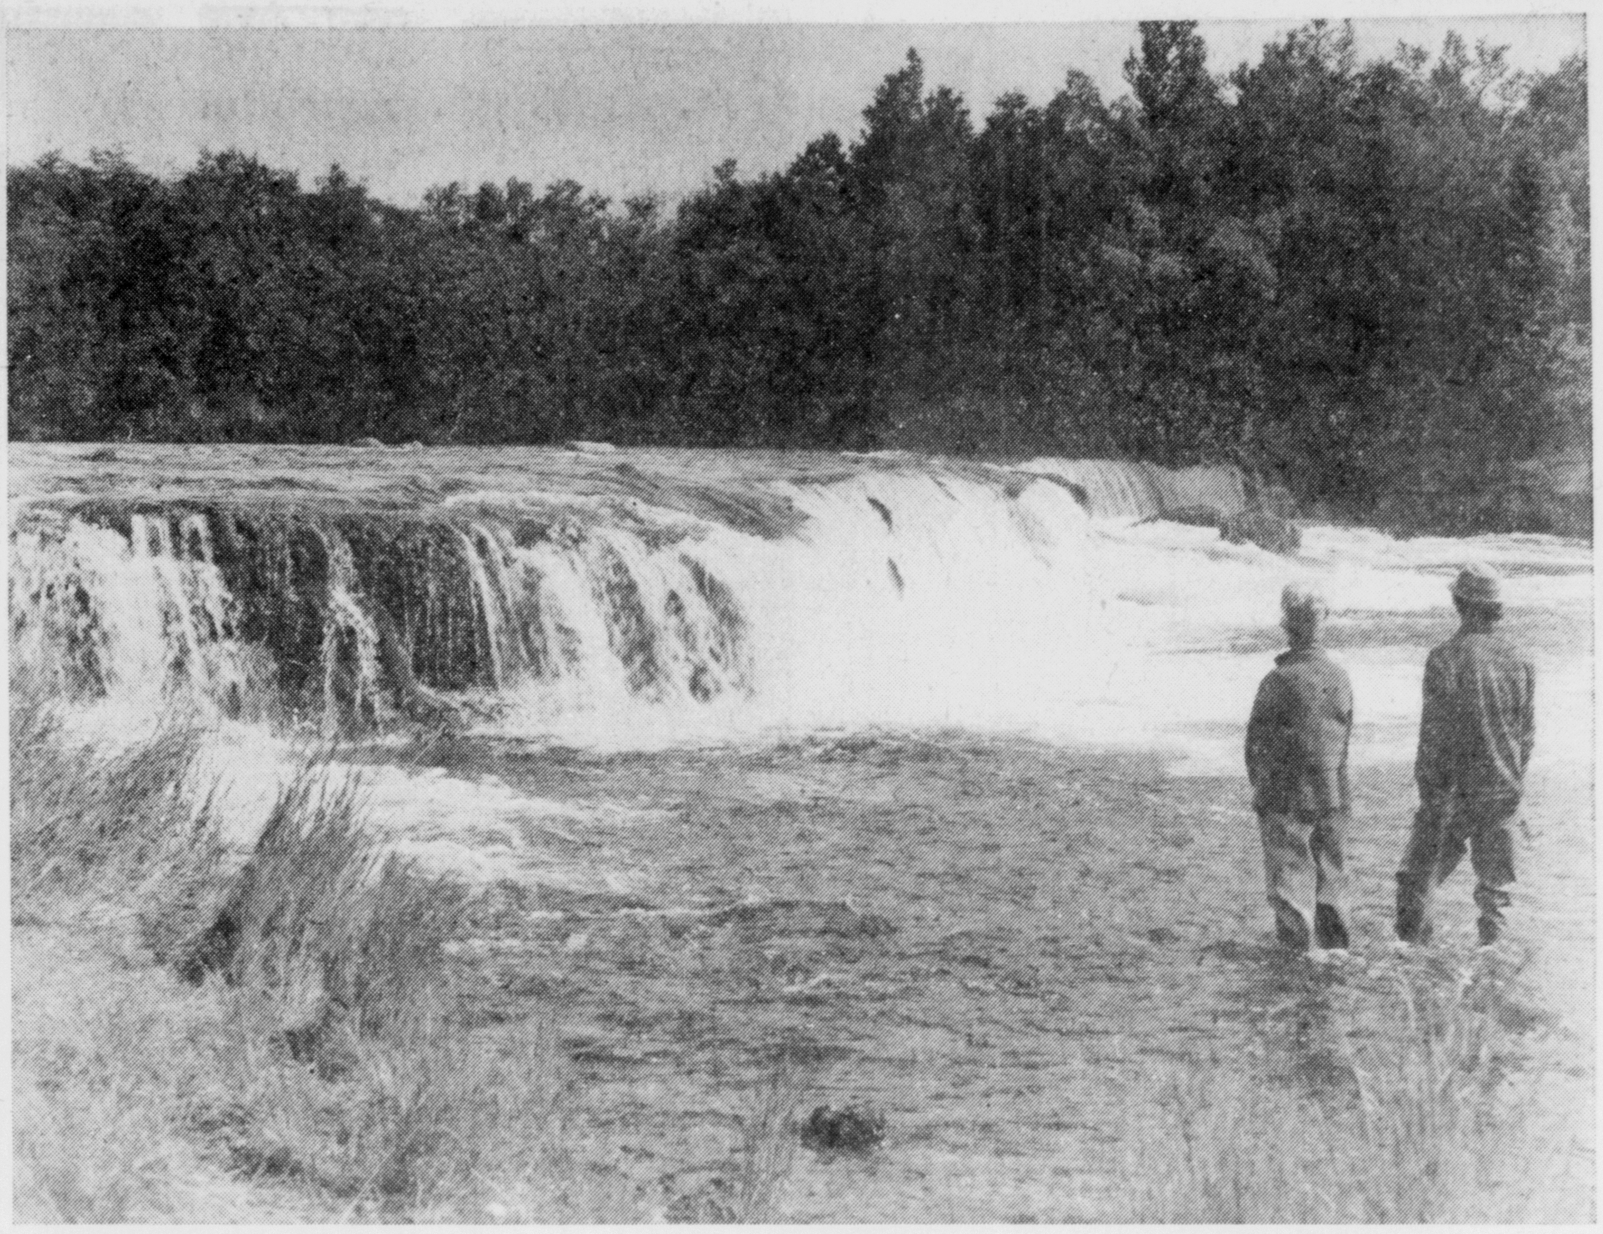

A northern pike bathes motionless under a bed of lilly pads while just a foot away, a paunchy walleye and school of perch form a complete circle around an interesting and rare alligator gar.

The vertically-striped muskie flaunts his "king of the water" superiority in the company of a brook and brown trout.

Not only will the novice angler become familiar with the species he is tracking, but also their habits.

ANOTHER prime "fish-watching" spot is Alaska's Brook Falls in Katmai National Monument. Observers slip into a pair of waders and walk into the action.

During early summer spawning seasons, sockeye salmon battle valiantly to jump the 6 to 8-foot falls to return to their place of birth.

FISH WATCHING may be challenging bird watchers for attention, especially at Brook Falls in Katmai National Monument in Alaska. During the early summer spawning season, sockeye salmon battle valiantly to jump the 6-8 foot falls to return to place of birth.

Grabbin' gators makes ends meet

LOWRY, La. (UPI) — Like most sensible men, Russell Gary doesn't particularly enjoy climbing into waist-deep water to face a 14-foot alligator. But he's got to make a living.

"I make about as much money hunting 'gators as I do driving my school bus," said Gary, who also runs a marina and traps nutria when he has the chance. "I couldn't really say I make my living at any one of them."

Alligator hunting has been legal for three years in the southwestern corner of Louisiana, where 'gators outnumber people more than two-to-one. The annual season begins in late August and runs through September.

GARY, WHO stands only 4-foot-10, has become one of the top hunters — bringing in more than $8,000 worth of skins last year.

"When I first started I didn't have nobody to show me how to do it right," Gary said. "I wasn't putting my lines out right to start with. Then the next season I started using clothes pins to hang my lines."

Gary, 52, uses small birds as bait. He attaches them to a rope at the end of a pole and hangs the bait just above the water surface in clothesline fashion.

"You've gotta hang the bait out of the water or the crawfish will get to it," he said. "Then when the 'gator grabs the bait the rope holds him until I can get there."

THE ALLIGATORS are killed with a gun and then tossed into a boat for transfer to the Rockefeller Wildlife Refuge where the skins are auctioned. It sounds simple, but there are times when a 115-pound hunter can have problems.

"Sometimes you can just walk them into the boat," Gary said. "You know after you kill them their leg muscles keep moving for about an hour. If you take your time you can walk them into the boat after they're dead."

But even that fails occasionally, like last year when Gary caught a 14-foot alligator that weighed 450 pounds. "I had to get some help for that one," he said. "I usually hunt alone, but I had to get some help for that one."

Gary already is getting ready for the coming season. This year he plans to bring automation to his hunt.

"I GOT me a new machine," he said. "It's a ditching machine to cut runs in the swamp. I used one a couple years ago and it was nice.

"I got all my lines ready and I'll be out there the good Lord willing. I just hope the outlaws don't get too many of the 'gators before the season."

Will fish start begging and eating from bowls?

Fish at two Illinois lakes are going on a special weight gaining diet this summer, compliments of the Ralston Purina Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Ralston has donated six tons of fish food to the Illinois Department of Conservation IDC for an experimental feeding program at Big Lake in Silver Springs State Park, Kendall County, and Dolan Lake at Hamilton County Conservation Area.

Spot feeding started earlier this month at both lakes and will continue throughout the growing season or until about October, said IDC fishery biologist Ray Fisher.

THE PROGRAM is aimed at both catfish and panfish such as bluegill, crappie and sunfish. Half the feed is sinking feed for the catfish and half is floating feed for the panfish.

The purpose of the program, says Fisher, is simply "to increase the size of the fish, to make a more desirable fish than the lake could produce normally."

Feeding may also prove to be a useful fishery management tool for dealing with overly abundant, stunted bluegill and sunfish populations.

This often occurs because fishing pressure is directed more at predators of the panfish like bass and northern pike. With few predator fish, the panfish population explodes, and with too many bluegill none gets very big.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL feeding will hopefully bring the typical bluegill weight from about five ounces to a very respectable eight ounces or more.

Newly spawned panfish will be thinned in shore during August when the larger fish head for deeper water. Otherwise, Fisher said, just feeding the fish without any population ctronl "would be like pouring sand down a mine shaft."

Big Lake at 16 acres is expected to use only about half as much feed as Dolan Lake with its 71 acres. The feed is placed in flating feeders daily at several locations in each lake. The amount of feed will gradually be increased until fish in the area of each feeder seem to be able to eat no more.

Not all the fish in the lakes are expected to avail themselves of this high protein diet which consists largely of soybean meal, but Fisher hopes to measure effects of the feeding by sampling fish in the area of the feeders on a monthly basis.

Steel shot for 12-gauges

Steel shot will be mandatory only for hunters using 12-gauge shotguns while waterfowl hunting next fall in areas designated for non-toxic shot, according to a proposed regulation change by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The amendment is intended to clarify a misunderstanding about 10-gauge guns that resulted from the Service's announcement of the 1976 regulations. The Service specifically exempted smaller-than-12 gauge shotguns from the steel shot regulations lst year, but did not cover the 10-gauge. The new rule will permit use of lead shot for the 10-gauge as well as all other gauges other than 12-gauge.

Steel shot is the only approved nontoxic shot and it has been manufactured in 12-gauge only. Therefore the Service is proposing that in the waterfowl hunting seasons beginning in the fall of 1977, shells loaded with lead shot can be used to hunt waterfowl in steel shot zones, provided these shells are not 12-gauge.

Approximately 85 per cent of all waterfowl hunters use the 12-gauge shotgun. The proposed ruling state that the hunter who is taking waterfowl in a designated steel shot zone with 12-gauge lead loads in his possession will be in violation of the regulation. Waterfowl hunters with lead loads in other gauges will not be in violation.

The Service points out that this exemption for gauges that have not been manufactured in steel shot will be reviewed again prior to the 1978 hunting seasons, but in the fall of 1979 no further exceptions will be made for lead shot in steel shot zones. These exceptions lessen the effectiveness of efforts to reduce lead poisoning among waterfowl using the zones.

Cubs happy, Cards angry

by ART MUGALIAN

Consider the balk. The lowly, maligned, misunderstood balk.

Somehow it lacks the drama of a bases-loaded triple or a pinch-hit homer. When it comes to winning ball games, the balk is about as effective as an infield fly. Half the time, nobody sees it.

Still, 36,086 Ladies Day fans at Wrigley Field stood up and cheered their loudest Friday afternoon for a balk — in the pouring rain, yet — in the bottom of the eighth inning.

THE "BALKER" WAS St. Louis relief pitcher Clay Carroll, a veteran of 14 years, two major leagues and 703 games. His balk with the bases full of Chicago Cubs, one out and a 2-and-2 count on pinch-batter Manny Trillo — that balk brought the fans to their feet and the Cubs to the brink of victory.

Carroll's negligence, if you will, went undetected by everyone in the ball park except the one man who mattered, umpire Bruce Froemming.

Scoring on the play was Steve Ontiveros, who had reached on a walk by previous Cardinal reliever Rawly Eastwick. Ontiveros, the "balkee," tied the score.

After much argument, carried on mostly by Carroll and Card manager Vern Rapp, Carroll pitched again and Trillo connected for a 100-foot single that bounced over the mound to second baseman Mike Tyson.

Tyson's throw was too late to get a sliding Gene Clines at the plate, and the ball got away anyway which allowed pinch-runner (that's right, pinch-runner) Rick Reuschel to score also.

THE TWO-RUN LEAD was enough of a cushion for Bruce Sutter to protect in the ninth inning for his 23rd save, although the Cardinals didn't go down without a fight before losing, 7-6.

Rapp was in a fighting mood in the visitors' lockerroom after the game. To begin with, he didn't like the idea of blowing 3-0 and 5-3 leads to the division-leading team, especially with his best bullpen men on the mound.

It was the balk call — made by third base umpire Froemming — that really turned Rapp into a raving manager. Froemming's ruling was that Carroll double-pumped, or came to a stop at the belt twice during his stretch.

"Feeney ought to get his umpires a refresher course," said Rapp, referring to league president Chub Feeney. "The rule says it has to deceive the runner. That's what the balk rule says. Did you see any deceiving the runner? That's ridiculous. If he double-pumped, he's been doing it for 20 years. What a time to call a balk!"

FROM THE OTHER end of the lockerroom, Carroll piped up: "I didn't double-pump, hell no. That Froemming must live here. You can give him a white uniform tomorrow."

Cardinal catcher Ted Simmons defended his pitcher to the hilt. "I sure as hell didn't see a double-pump," said the league's leading hitter, who had a single and a double plus two RBI's. "I'd say there was no difference in his delivery. I saw no balk."

Ontiveros said, "I didn't see anything. Froemming yelled and I jumped. I wasn't really paying attention to the pitcher."

Trillo, at the plate, pleaded innocence. "The third base umpire knows better than me if he balked," Manny said. "I was just happy to be batting with lots of men on base."

CARROLL EASILY MIGHT have gotten out of the jam with his 5-4 lead intact had it not been for the balk. Trillo was the first man he faced after relieving Eastwick.

"He made me look bad on the pitch before with a slider," Trillo pointed out. "I was looking for another slider but he threw a fastball outside. I was just going with it."

After the balk. the St. Louis infield moved in on the grass hoping for a play at the plate — and they got it. But Tyson's throw went to the screen as two runs scored. Trillo earned a hit and an RBI.

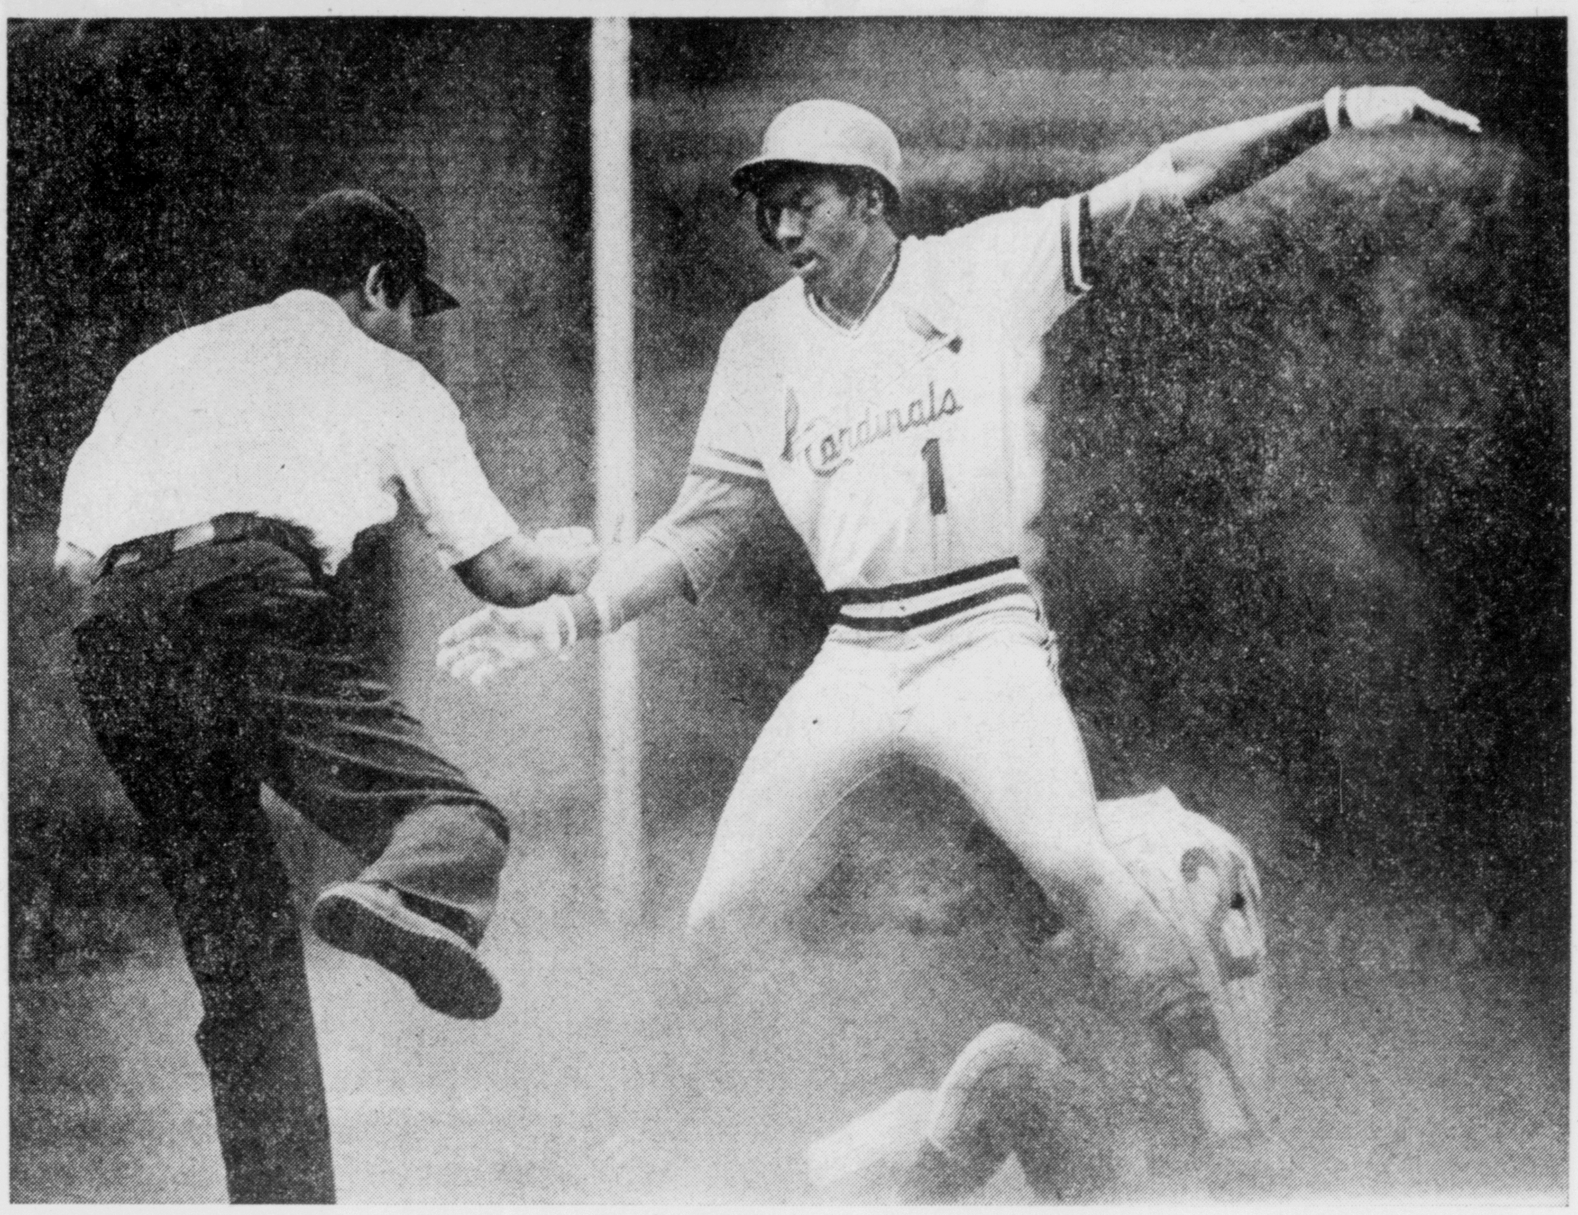

The inning had started with Eastwick on the mound for the tiring Eric (D o n ' t-call-me-Harry) Rasmussen, who pitched seven strong innings with an assortment of curves and change-ups but left with just a one-run edge.

WITH ONE OUT, Eastwick walked Ontiveros and pinch-hitter Clines and gave up a line single to pinch-hitter Bill Buckner, Ontiveros stopping at third. Rick Reuschel, whose brother Paul, (3-1) got the win in relief of Ray Burris, went in to run for sore-legged Buckner.

"Rick's pretty quick for his size," explained Cub manager Herman Franks. "Besides, how many other guys can I throw in there?"

The Cubs, in winning their third straight, racked up 10 hits including two more for the rampaging Ontiveros, now at .299, and a two-run homer for Ivan DeJesus, his second of the year, which came in the third with the Cards ahead 3-0. Later in the inning, Jerry Morales drove home the tying run with a double.

St. Louis took a 5-3 lead on Garry Templeton's homer and an RBI double for Simmons in the fifth, but a run-scoring single by Larry Biittner in the seventh cut the margin to 5-4.

British Open showdown

Nicklaus, Watson hold advantage

TURNBERRY, Scotland (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, defying thunder and lightning, played up a storm Friday and shot five under par 65s to share the lead at 203 after three rounds of the $170,000 British Open golf classic.

Playing together at the rear of the field, the two American masters relentlessly reduced the 6,875-yard Ailsa course to tatters while taking a three-shot lead over the field.

Nicklaus, the 37-year-old Golden Bear from Florida, picked up four birdies on the front nine to score a four-under-par 31 and go six under. Watson, the 27 year old U.S. Masters champion, hung on like a leech and turned on 33, two strokes away.

ONLY A VIOLENT thunderstorm, which suspended play for a half-hour interrupted their titanic struggle.

The two started the round one stroke behind the overnight leader, Roger Maltbie, together with Lee Trevino and Hubie Green in a tie for second place.

But they both made it obvious they were out for the kill.

"I wanted to make it a one-man tournament, and Tom wanted to make it a one-man tournament, but instead it turned into a two-man tournament," Nicklaus said. "But even that's not true as there is still Ben Crenshaw three strokes away."

CRENSHAW finished with a 66 for an aggregate of 206.

Nicklaus and Watson, on target to beat the Open record of 276, scored birdies at the 452-yard 10th hole and tucked away par scores until the 14th.

Nicklaus, trying to sink a 20 foot putt, swung his ball a foot to allow for the borrow, but the ball slid 3½ feet past the cup. He stared in disbelief when his next tap failed to drop and he had dropped a stroke for the first time in the round.

Watson, over the green with his second iron, chipped to within a yard of the flag and saved his par four.

ENCOURAGED, Watson drove home a 20-foot putt for a birdie two on the 209-yard 15th and Nicklaus missed about a 14-foot chance to do the same.

Watson had a lucky escape on the 16th when his ball nearly rolled back from the green into a brook. Instead, his approach shot hung on the bank and he chipped to within a foot of the hole and both players got their par.

Nicklaus faltered again when he missed another three-foot putt and the chance of an eagle on the 500-yard 17th and Watson equalled his birdie.

Both parred the final two holes with a crowd of more than 18,000 cheering the players off the course.

TREVINO, WHO dropped back to par with a third round 72, summed it up: "Tomorrow is going to be a great battle between the Golden Bear and the Teddy Bear . . . it will be great for all the people."

Trevino, hit by lightning two years ago in the Western Open in Chicago, said the storm Friday "scared me to death" but he didn't blame it for a double bogey on the 8th and a bogey on the 9th.

"I just missed with my putter," he said. "I've been standing over it too long."

Maltbie dropped one stroke to share fourth place at 209 with Gaylord Burrows, the poker-playing pro from Louisiana, and Britain's Tommy Horton, whose 65 made him the only non-American in the top 10.

DEFENDING champion Johnny Miller, playing his best round of the tournament, shot a 67 to move up with Trevino at 210.

Miller was another to have putting troubles but took some advice from fellow American George Burns on the practice green.

"I putted much better and I actually hit the hole seven times when the ball didn't go in — which would have made my round much better," he said.

The 30-year-old Mormon from Napa, Calif., without a tournament win for 16 months, said he thought he "maybe had a chance" of holding onto his crown, despite a four-stroke disadvantage in the final round.

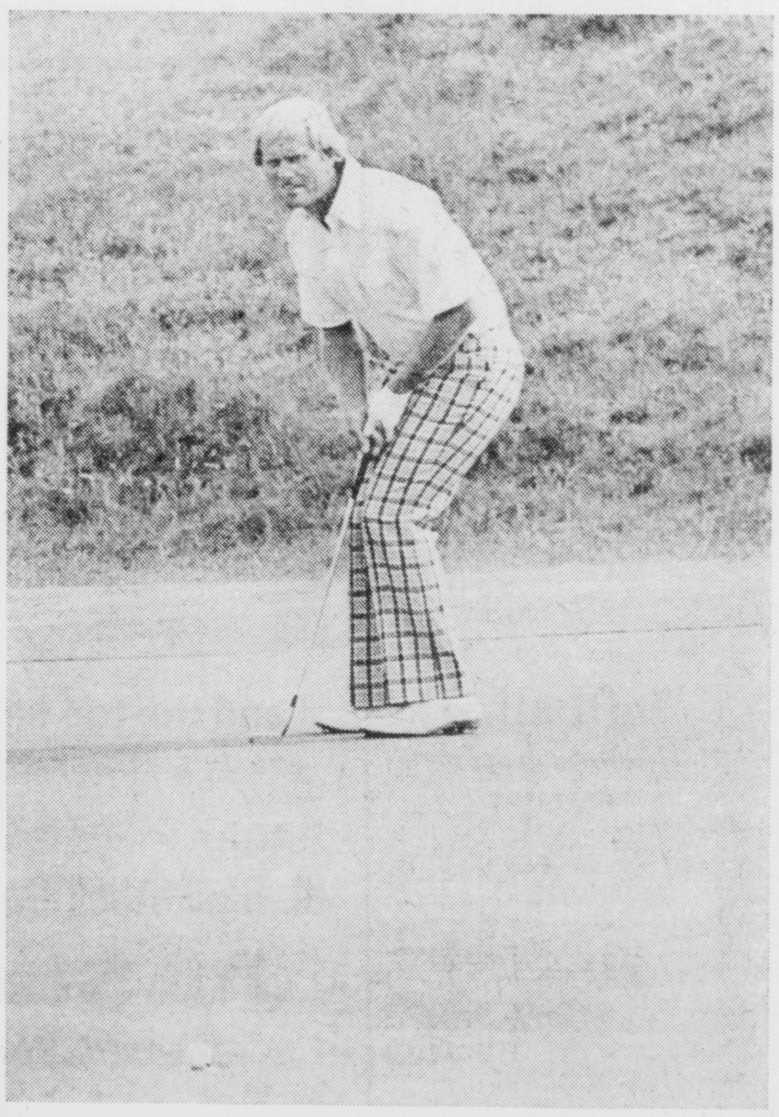

RAY FLOYD had a 68 to join Mark Hayes — who had a 72 — at 211.

Green, the U.S. Open titleholder, held a triple bogey on the first hole and never recovered to finish at 74 for an aggregate of 212 along with Burns and Britain's Howard Clark.

But only Crenshaw appeared any sort of a danger to the Watson-Nicklaus shoot-out for the $17,000 prize over the final 18 holes today.

T h e soft-spoken "Gentle Ben" played precision golf Friday, methodically picking up four birdies without once dropping a stroke.

"I've developed a little more rhythm each day of the tournament," he said. "Tomorrow, I'll just try to play the best I can."

JACK NICKLAUS just misses a birdie putt on the fifth green during third round Friday of the British Open Golf Championships in Turnberry, Scotland. Nicklaus and Tom Watson are tied for the lead.

Sox get to 'Bird', hike lead with 10-7 triumph

DETROIT — The White Sox used offensive power to win their eighth game in a row by collecting 17 hits in a 10-7 victory over the Tigers Friday night.

Eleven of those hits came off Detroit hero Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, who ended up losing his second straight game. The Sox entered the three-game series with a 1-4 record against the Tigers this season.

Don Kirkwood picked up the victory with 6 2/3 innings of effective relief pitching. He was backed by Jorge Orta's five RBIs. The Sox were finally able to gain on the Minnesota Twins, who lost to Seattle, 13-11. Their lead is now 3½ games.

THE SOX GOT a first-inning run off Fidrych with the help of two Tiger errors. Ralph Garr, who had walked to open the inning, scored when Orta's single was misplayed in right field.

But Detroit came right back to tie the game after Ron LeFlore led off with a single to left. Tito Fuentes, who forced LeFlore at second, scored on Steve Kemp's long double off Sox starter Chris Knapp.

Garr and Alan Bannister scored in the third to give Knapp a 3-1 edge, but he couldn't hold it. The Tigers built a 5-3 lead for Fidrych with three runs coming in during the third. That inning was the last for Knapp.

But it was not the night of "The Bird" as the Sox showed the premiere Tiger pitcher that it is not easy to last long when facing the Chicago lineup.

FIDRYCH HAD TO be lifted, much to his disapproval, in the sixth inning when the Sox took a 6-5 lead. Jim Spencer singled, Jim Essian doubled and then, with two outs, controversy swung in the Sox' favor.

Jorge Orta

Alan Bannister

Bannister hit a smash to third that was stopped by Chuck Scrivener. The Tiger third baseman made a diving attempt at Essian, who was racing into the bag. The umpire called it safe for Essian.

Fidrych and his teammates stormed the umpire to protest the call. When the arguments were over, Orta drove in the tying run, which finished off Fidrych.

Richie Zisk singled in the lead run off Jim Crawford. When the Tigers batted in the bottom of the sixth, the rain that had been threatening the entire game began to fall.

ABOUT 30 persons were ticketed for disorderly conduct during the delay, which lasted for about one hour. They ran onto the field and slid on the rain-slickened plastic tarp, taunting security guards who tried to chase them.

At one point, when the guards were wrestling a trespasser to the ground, fans in the left-field box seat area threw their chairs onto the field. Others, however, were picking debris off the field while many of the 45,993 spectators were leaving.

After the delay, the Sox did some disorderly damage to the pitching of Crawford. Lamar Johnson doubled to left to open the seventh and scored on Spencer's single to right.

Eric Soderholm followed with a single, but Crawford was able to retire the next two batters. Bannister kept the rally going with a walk to load the bases.

ORTA WAS SOON the lone Sox runner as his bases-clearing double to the center-field wall made the score 10-5 a n d p r o m p t e d another pitching change.

Sox manager Bob Lemon made a good move when he brought Kirkwood in to relieve Knapp in the third. Kirkwood's only mistake was a pitch to Kemp, which the left fielder belted for his 11th home run in the seventh inning. It scored LeFlore from third.

The series continues tonight with Ken Kravec (4-2) going against Fernando Arroyo (5-6).

Phillies fall, trail by four

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Jim Fregosi walked on four pitches to force home Al Oliver with one out in the last of the ninth, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates an 8-7 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a game marked by two bench-clearing incidents.

Philadelphia now trails the Cubs by four full games in the National League East. The loss broke an eight-game Phillies' winning streak.

Al Oliver led off the Pirates' ninth with his second double. After an intentional walk to Willie Stargell, both runners advanced on a sacrifice by Rennie Stennett. Pinch-hitter Fernando Gonzalez was intentionally walked to load the bases and losing pitcher Warren Brusstar walked Fregosi to end the game.

Smart Deb split in two divisions

The Smart Deb Handicap at Arlington today has drawn 23 trants, causing racing secretary Tinker Lane to split the feature into two divisions, both $30,000 added events at a mile and one-sixteenth on the grass for three-year-old fillies.

Unreality, Ludova and Wanda's Tear, along with Don't Cry Barbi, head the first division (eighth race), while Sweet Alliance, Splendid Size and Sans Arc are main contenders in the second division (ninth race).

Unreality has a handful of victories in eight starts this year for earnings that top the $60,000 mark. The In Reality gal has won four in a row.

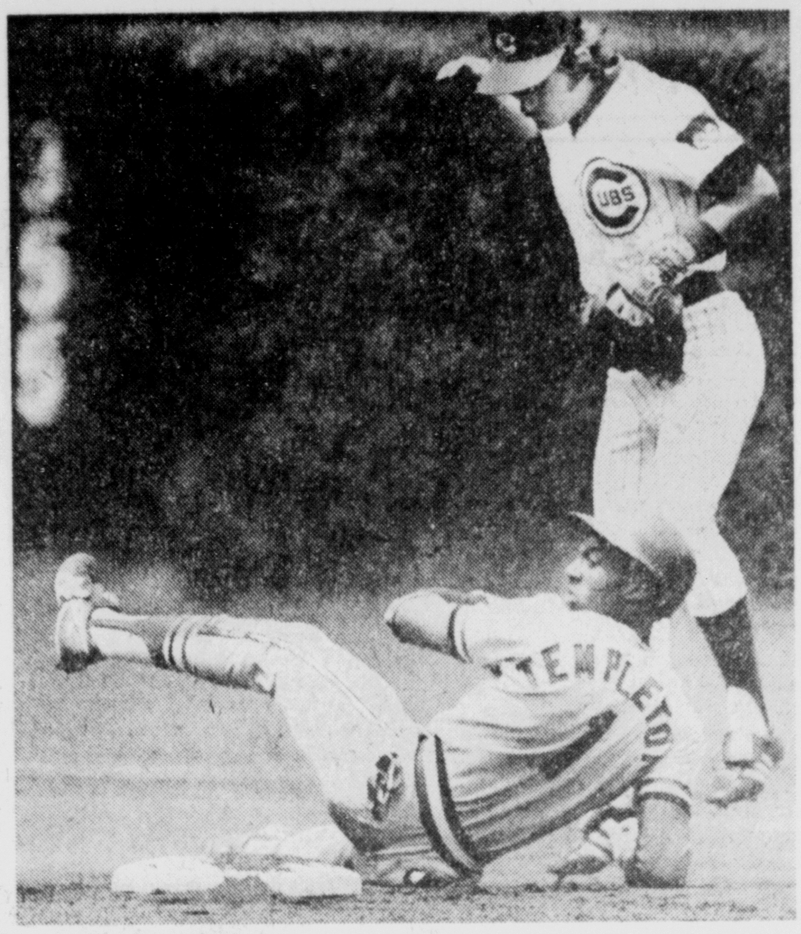

Ludova, haltered for $15,000 in April, has climbed the scale rather well with the care of trainer Tom Kole. The Ireland-bred likes to come from off the pace as she did here in her last start when she turned back Splendid Size by three and one-half lengths. In eight trips postward this season, Ludova has yet to finish off the board, winning three, placing four times and posting one third.

Wanda's Tear, trained by the always dangerous Del Carroll, ships in from Atlantic City. Don't Cry Barbi has landed in the winner's circle three times in six starts this season. A stakes' winner at Ak-Sar-Ben, the Barbizon gal has put away $40,705 thus far in 1977.

Sweet Alliance has pocketed $149,105 in earnings this year with four wins, two seconds and two thirds in nine starts. Splendid Size has sprinted to three victories in four 1977 trips postward and was second in her first try at a route in her last start here in which she set a wicked pace.

Conditioner Stanley Rieser has shipped in Sans Arc from New Jersey. Her last three races were on the grass, and she showed a definite liking for the sod, for she has posted a victory and two seconds.

Also, Arlington will present a lucky fan today with a 13-foot Sunfish Sailboat with a special drawing after the eighth race.

Irish football star appeals suspension

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame football star Al Hunter, insisting he was suspended "for doing nothing," announced Friday he will go to court to appeal the university's action.

The senior halfback from Greenville, N.C., who last season became the first Notre Dame ballcarrier to total 1,000 yards, made his announcement at a news conference.

Hunter was suspended for the fall semester for allegedly violating university rules. Specifically, he was accused of visiting the room of a female student during "after hours."

Although he was cleared of the charges in a university judicial hearing in May, the ruling was later overturned and affirmed by the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, the university's president.

"I want everyone to know that I was found innocent . . . I was acquitted unanimously of any rules violation," Hunter said in a prepared statement. "The public must be made to understand that my suspension was in the face of this determination."

Hunter said he complied "with all university directives and procedures despite their refusal to do so."

"Now I have no other recourse except a court of law to redress this wrong," he added.

Porsches dominate Endurance field

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y.—The powerful Porsche 935 of Germany's Jochen Mass and Belgium's Jackie Ickx won the pole position Friday for today's Six Hours of Endurance for the World Championship of Makes.

Mass, a Formula One regular with the McLaren Team and Ickx, a four-time winner of the 24 Hours of Le Mans, barely beat two other international drivers for the top time, but easily smashed the 3.377-mile course qualifying record.

Mass drove the car to an average lap speed of 108.05 miles per hour, a lap of one minute, 52.518 seconds.

Sweden's Ronnie Peterson and England's David Hobbs weren't far behind at 1:52.997. That time, turned by Peterson, also broke the course record, which stood at 1:55.249, set by Mass last July in a Porsche 935.

The top 10 was dominated by Porsches. Only the second-place BMW and the fifth-place Corvette of John Greenwood and Dick Smothers managed to interrupt the domination of the German factory.

Regalado's 133 heads Quad-Cities

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — Victor Regalado withstood a four-hour, seven-minute rain delay Friday to score a 9-under-par 133 for 36 holes and take the lead in the Quad Cities Open.

All the afternoon players did not finish the par-71, 6,630-yard Oakwood Country Club course, however, because of the delay. The second round will be completed today.

Regalado, of Tijuana, Mexico, shot a 66 Friday to go with his first-round 67.

Fuzzy Zoeller had a 9-under-par 133 after 32 holes. If he pars his last four holes Saturday, he will tie for the lead with Regalado.

Two players who finished the second round — Gary McCord and Keith Fergus — were tied for second place with 8-under-par 134s.

No shirts for Texas 'Shirt Night'

ARLINGTON, Tex. — The Texas Rangers, who have had more than their share of problems this season, had another large one Friday night — explaining to a large gathering of children why they couldn't have their team t-shirts.

The Rangers had for weeks promoted the Friday game with the California Angels as "Shirt Night" with each youngster under the age of 13 receiving a replica of the Rangers jersey.

A California company was supposed to ship 8,000 shirts in for the game. But Friday afternoon, the Rangers promotional department learned they weren't on the way.

"We didn't even know there was a problem until Tuesday," Rangers spokesman said. "We still thought that they would be here tonight."

Young takes lead in LPGA event

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Donna Caponi Young fired seven birdies, including four in a row, to post a 5-under-par 68 and wrestle the first round lead from Kathy Linney Friday in the $75,000 LPGA Bankers Trust Golf Classic.

Linney, a second-year pro from Scotch Plains, N.J., had fired five straight birdies following a double bogey to post her first-round 70 for the early lead at the Locust Hill Country Club. She scored six birdies, a bogey and one double-bogey in the second round.

Only 11 golfers shot sub-par rounds, including Judy Rankin's 1-under-par 72.

Sports people

Jimmy Connors, who lost the final at Wimbledon last week, reinjured his right thumb during a practice session in Austin, Tex., and withdrew from the $200,000 WCT Tournament of Champions . . .

Finley and move them to Washington as a National League team . . . Commissioner Larry O'Brien indicated that the NBA would oppose any move by the New York Nets to New Jersey if the move would jeopardize what he called "the principal of territorial exclusivity." . . . .

Jockey sensation Steve Cauthen, the nation's leading rider, won his 300th victory of 1977 Thursday with a two-length win aboard Gun Blast in the first race at Belmont Park .

'A win's a win'

Franks remains relaxed

The Cubs are in first place, the Cardinals have flown in from St. Louis, and this will be the most important weekend of the season.

Right?

Wrong.

Wrong, according to Cub manager Herman Franks, the aging, balding, rotund millionaire businessman who stepped out of retirement and back into baseball in 1977.

EACH DAY IS like another grain of sand in the shifting desert of Herman Franks' life, now in its 63rd and perhaps most exciting year.

When he took the job as Cub manager last winter, Franks never dreamed that he would be in first place in mid-July. Only in his boldest visions could he have seen his team above the .500 level.

"Hey, winning is a lot of fun," he remarked earlier in the season.

NOW, WITH THE PRESSURES of the pennant race closing in around him, Franks refuses to be trapped by reporters seeking to pin him down with questions about "must games" and crucial series.

"There are no must games," said Herman the other day, reclining in a soft chair behind his office desk. "What if we play a must game and we lose it? What then? Do we just fall in a hole and call an end to the season?

"They're all important," Franks continued. "Each game is just as important as another. There's no more pressure just because it's St. Louis. A win's a win."

THE CUB manager took a puff from his huge cigar and leaned back again, displaying to full view his extra-large tee-shirt that proclaimed "The Cubs Will Soar to Heaven in '77."

When he next spoke, there was a twinkle in Franks' elfin eyes.

"You know, a fellow I play racquetball with has never won a match," he said. "Never won — even once. I beat him all the time. One day he came around to play and I wasn't there so he asked my wife to play. My wife hadn't played racquetball in her life, but thus guy played her and beat life, but this guy played her and beat

"He came back and told me he beat my wife and all I could say was, 'How could you have the nerve to brag about beating someone who never played before?'

Byline report

"And do you know what he said? He said, 'A win's a win.' "

FRANKS BLEW a wisp of smoke ward and laughed at his story, hoping at the same time that the lesson would sink in.

"Hey, they're all important," he repeated.

Actually, Franks doesn't care whether or not the writers learn a lesson from him. His only interest is keeping his ball club on an even keel. Beating the Cardinals is no more important than beating the Expos. Winning in July is no more crucial than winning in April, no less so than in September.

"My job is to keep the players from getting down," he said during the Cubs' recent tailspin when they lost seven of eight games.

Franks leads by example.

"I still sleep well at night," he said. "I always sleep well. Tomorrow's just another game."

IF THE CUBS WIN the Eastern Division title and go on to make their first World Series appearance in 32 years, Franks will be Manager of the Year. He will be in all likelihood, Manager of the Century.

He has a long way to go yet. There are many, many tomorrows left on the schedule.

But if there should be cause for bright lights and TV cameras in the Cub lockerroom next October, and if 25 Cub players take turns pouring champagne over each other, then Herman Franks will have to face the press one more time.

Will he, then, sit back and say, "A win's a win?"

CUBS' PITCHER Steve Renko checks over a Cub cheering section before game with St. Louis in Wrigley Field. The quartet from Peoria made up their own special T-shirts, which may have "helped" the Cubs win the first two games of the series.

Seattle helps Sox, handles Twins

From Herald Wire Services

Bill Stein, who used to play for the White Sox, helped his former teammates Friday night as he paced the Seattle Mariners to a 13-11 victory over the Minnesota Twins in Bloomington, Minn.

Stein drove in four runs with a pair of home runs and Lee Stanton added a homer, double and single to drive in five more.

Rod Carew had a double and single in four at-bats to raise his average one point to .403 as the Twins fell 3½ games behind the White Sox in the American League West.

IN OTHER American League play Kansas City, Cleveland, New York and Boston posted victories.

The host Kansas City Royals ripped Vida Blue for five straight hits leading off the fourth inning, including back-to-back doubles by Amos Otis and John Mayberry and consecutive triples by Fred Patek and Frank White, to score five runs en route to a 6-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Dennis Leonard, 7-9, limited the A's to six hits while striking out a career-high 13 batters, tying a Kansas City team record, in sending the A's to their sixth straight defeat.

Major league baseball

Larvell Blanks drove in five runs with a pair of homers and Dennis Eckersley tossed a six-hitter as the Cleveland Indians snapped a three-game losing streak with an 11-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays in Cleveland.

AT BALTIMORE Thurman Munson drove in four runs with his 12th homer and a two run single to carry the New York Yankees to a 7-5 victory over Baltimore that snapped the Orioles' seven-game winning streak.

Greg Nettles batted in three runs with a two-run double and a leadoff homer in the ninth as the first-place Yankees registered their fourth straight win and moved two games ahead of the Orioles in the American League East.

Reggie Cleveland scattered eight hits and George Scott, Bernie Carbo and Jim Rice slammed home runs to pace a 14-hit Boston attack as the Red Sox handed the Milwaukee Brewers their fourth straight loss, 7-3, in Milwaukee.

IN THE NATIONAL League Jose Morales' pinch-hit sacrifice fly in the seventh inning snapped a 2-2 tie and Chris Speier and Ellis Valentine each scored a pair of runs to guide the Montreal Expos to a 5-4 victory and send the New York Mets to their ninth consecutive loss.

The nine game losing streak is the Mets' longest since 1965.

At Houston George Foster hit his 24th home run and drove in four runs as the Cincinnati Reds scored six runs in the seventh inning en route to an 8-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

Pinch-hitter Bob Bailey opened the Reds' seventh with a walk and Cincinnati followed with six hits, including a three-run shot by Foster, a run-scoring single by Griffey and Cesar Geronimo's two-run double.

DePaul's Corzine invited to World Games tryouts

Dave Corzine, DePaul University's 6'11" center from Hersey High School, has been invited to tryout for the World University Games to be held in Sophia, Bulgaria.

Denny Crum, head basketball coach at the University of Louisville and coach of the U.S. entry in the Games, described them as "second, only to the Olympic Games, in prestige world-wide." Some 5,000 athletes, representing 75 countries, will compete in the Games.

Teams entered in the basketball tournament include the USA, USSR, Cuba, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Spain and Puerto Rico.

The 12-man U.S. basketball team will be chosen from top college players. Tryouts will be held at Louisville July 18th through the 29th. The team will leave for Italy on the 30th and play exhibitions there and in Yugoslavia before the World Games. They will return to the U.S. on August 28th.

IN HIS JUNIOR year, Corzine battled a tough DePaul schedule which included UCLA, Maryland, Marquette (twice), Notre Dame and Providence. He averaged 19 points and 12.6 rebounds per game. He was 15th leading rebounder nationally and, looking toward his senior year, only 8 of the 14 ahead of him return.

In two games against No. 1 Marquette he scored 51 points and pulled 25 rebounds; he scored 30 against Maryland; in only 23 foul-plagued minutes he had 17 points and 10 rebounds against UCLA; he had 16 against ND.

In other games, Dave scored 27 (Dayton); 26 twice (Duquesne and Creighton) and 25 (St. Louis). He was over 20 points 13 times and only three times failed to get double figures in rebounding.

At the season's end Dave was named Special Mention All-American by The Sporting News. This was based on the voting by NBA general managers and chief scouts. The players were evaluated on college achievement and pro potential.

Some other players who will try out are Phil Hubbard (Michigan), Walter Jordan (Purdue), Larry Bird (Indiana State) and Freeman Williams (Portland State), the nation's No. 1 scorer.

Join the women in your community who serve in the Army Reserve.

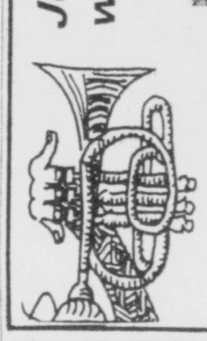

A lot of women have discovered a good place to invest their time . . . The Army Reserve. Some came for the additional income and because of equal opportunities for advancement. Some came to learn a new skill and to expand their interests in a career of their choice. Some came to gain experience and self-confidence.

And some came to do something positive for their Country. Which is a pretty good reason in itself.

AN AERIAL VIEW shows the two RTA rapid transit cars that collided head-on on the E. 92nd Street overpass in Cleveland Friday. Up to 50 persons were injured in the mishap. Some passengers were trapped inside the cars while others were hurled down an embankment.

50 hurt in crash of two Cleveland transit trains

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Two rapid transit trains, both on the same track because of an apparent signal malfunction, collided head-on Friday on an overpass, trapping some passengers and hurling others over an embankment.

Authorities said at least 50 persons were injured.

Police said some of the injured were thrown down an embankment and a fire department snorkle truck was used to lift them out.

INVESTIGATORS SAID both trains were moving on the same track because of an apparent signal malfunction. They said roadwork was being done in the area and the trains were traveling about 35 miles per hour when they crashed on the city's east side.

"I saw it as we hit," said public relations consultant Lee Helper, 24, of Cleveland, who was on the westbound train headed downtown for work. "I saw the car being compressed backward. It was sheer terror."

The extend of injuries was not known immediately, but three passengers — two of them boys aged 12 and 13 — were trapped inside the wreckage for more than an hour before being rescued.

"We ripped the car open," said firefighter John Lechner, 34, who along with 20 other firemen used gasoline-powered saws and prybars to help rescue the victims. "We tore a lot of it by hand, too, taking apart brackets piece by piece."

Many of the injured were hit by flying debris.

Rescue personnel also were forced to carry the injured about a quarter of a mile along the Greater Cleveland Regional Transit Authority tracks in stretchers and strapped to backboards. Ambulances then took them to area hospitals.

FIREFIGHTERS WORK to free a trapped youngster aboard a RTA rapid transit car after two trains collided on the east side of Cleveland Friday. Both trains were moving on the same track due to an apparent signal malfunction.

Four townships hope for future help from RTA

Four Northwest suburban townships hope to get more attention from the Regional Transportation Authority in the fiscal 1979 budget.

The reason is a transit development plan now being prepared by the RTA for Wheeling, Elk Grove, Schaumburg and Barrington townships. The RTA staff is working on the plan, which will outline transit needs for the area.

The four townships are sandwiched between two mass transit districts. The North Suburban Mass Transit District is developing plans for northern suburbs as far west as Wheeling and Des Plaines.

To the south and west, the Northwest Mass Transit District is developing plans for communities along the Milwaukee Road.

To date, however, there has been no transit planning for the area in between. That has meant few programs for the area have been included in the RTA budget.

Work on the study was prompted by the Northwest Administrators Council and the Northwest Municipal Conference, both recognizing the need for transportation planning.

Robert Fialkowski of the municipal conference will act as liaison with the RTA staff, overseeing work on the study.

"Our eventual hope is to get something concrete out of this," Fialkowski said, noting the study could mean new service for the Northwest suburbs.

He said the study will concentrate on the Chicago and North Western Ry. as well as the need for intercommunity travel.

The RTA expects recommendations from the study to be ready for consideration during next year's budget hearings.

Gas dealers group urges vote on RTA's gas tax

The Illinois Gasoline Dealers Assn. is planning a campaign to force a public referendum on the recently approved Regional Transportation Authority 5 per cent gas tax.

A drive to obtain signatures will begin soon, an association spokesman said Friday. The association may also file an injunction against the gas tax, scheduled to go into effect in October.

The controversial gas tax, approved last month, will add about 2.8 cents to the pump price of a gallon of gas. It is expected to produce about $55 million during fiscal 1978. Without the tax, the RTA would have to cut service and raise fares throughout the region.

The gas dealers are only one group trying to stop the tax. Unsuccessful Chicago mayoral candidate Anthony Martin-Trigona also has threatened to sue.

RTA officials said they expect the tax to be tested in court.

Consumer credit up by $2.53 billion

Consumer credit expanded by $2.53 billion in May, a moderate slowdown from the previous two months but still the third biggest increase ever, the Federal Reserve Board said Friday. The May increase was $130 million less than the $2.66 billion gain in April and $190 million below the record $2.72 billion jump in March. Gains averaged $1.9 billion for December, January and February. Economists appear to be evenly divided over the effects on the total economy of the steep increases in consumer borrowing so far this year. Some analysts contend the sharp rise in recent months could hinder economic growth later this year and in 1978. They say major problems could develop for banks and other lenders if consumers have trouble paying off their mounting debts and thus push up the loan default rate. But other economists believe the debt building demonstrates an increasing confidence in the American economy on the part of consumers.

Buyers uncertain about economy

Consumer confidence rebounded in June after dropping earlier this year, but some uncertainty about the course of the economy still exists, according to the Conference Board. The board's consumer confidence index (1969-70 equals 100) climbed to 89.2, four points above the April reading. They buying plans index surged by 11 points to 121.3. Consumers are notable optimistic about current economic conditions, according to the bimonthly nationwide surveys conducted for the board by National Family Opinion, Inc., of Toledo, Ohio. Roughly 27 per cent said business is "good," compared with 24 per cent in April. Only 14 per cent found business conditions "bad," down from 17 per cent in the April survey. Consumers have some skepticism about the future, however. Less than 20 per cent expect business conditions to improve over the next six months, compared with 22 per cent in April. Some 19 per cent believe there will be fewer jobs, up from 17 per cent in the previous survey.

Burial vault strike continues

The strike by Chicago area burial vault production workers continued Friday, following the Thursday night rejection by Teamsters Local 786 members of a new contract offer. Joseph O'Leary, an attorney representing the Assn. of Burial Vault Manufacturers, said Friday the four manufacturers affected by the month-long strike await further meetings with Teamster officials. "I'm hoping I can bring them together again next week," federal mediator Sam Mazza said. Approximately 100 workers have been idled by the strike. American Wilbert Vault Corp., which has a plant at 165 N. River Road, Des Plaines, is affected by the work stoppage. Other manufacturers affected by the strike are Kay-El Manufacturing Co., Standard Elsmere Granite Co. and Sterling Vault Co., Chicago.

Chrysler '78 models to go up $350

Chrysler Corp. Friday became the second U.S. automaker to signal a 6 per cent price increase — $350 — on its 1978 models with the announcement that its dealers can begin accepting orders from fleet customers. General Motors sent its "price protection" letters to dealers in mid-June and a Ford Motor Co. spokesman said the No. 2 automaker "is very close" to sending its notices. Like Chrysler, GM told dealers they could quote potential fleet buyers figures up to 6 per cent above comparable 1977 models with the knowledge that the company, not the dealer, will absorb price increases above 6 per cent.

United asks domestic fare hike

United Airlines said Friday it will seek a 1.5 per cent increase in domestic passenger fares. United officials said they will ask the Civil Aeronautics Board to approve the increase effective Aug. 15. American Airlines previously asked for an identical increase. United said its filing supercedes a previously announced intention to file for a 1 per cent increase effective Aug. 15.

U.S. tankers to carry more oil

President Carter has agreed to back legislation that would guarantee that U.S. flag tankers eventually will carry nearly 10 per cent of the nation's oil imports, the White House said Friday. Deputy press secretary Rex Granum said the Commerce Dept. would give details of the proposed legislation Monday. But he confirmed that a Washington Post story on the measure was "basically correct." The American maritime industry has been seeking at least 30 per cent of the nation's oil imports of 8 million barrels a day. Unitl now, American tankers have been hauling only 3 per cent of it.

"They like to leave on time, don't they?"

U.S. wholesale prices take dive; Chicago jobless rate down 0.5%

Wholesale prices dropped 0.6 per cent during June, — the biggest price cut in nearly four years, but the nationwide jobless rate climbed 0.2 per cent to 7.1 during the same month, the U.S. Labor Dept., reported Friday.

Chicago area fared better than the rest of the nation. The jobless rate in the metropolitan area dropped 0.5 per cent, from 4.8 per cent in May to 4.3 per cent.

The Illinois Dept. of Labor reported the state unemployment rate during June slid from 5.2 per cent to 4.6 per cent.

The Labor Dept. also said prices in the important category of consumer-ready goods were down 0.2 per cent in June, an indication of somewhat lower prices could show up soon in retail stores.

FARM AND FOOD prices accounted for virtually all of the first decline in the Wholesale Price Index in 10 months. The WPI is a sensitive inflation barometer that measures prices charged for sales in large quantities by producers.

Food prices fell 6.3 per cent from May for the largest one-month decline since June 1974, the Labor Dept. said.

The over-all dip of 0.6 per cent was the biggest since the WPI fell 1.6 per cent in September, 1973.

The June decline followed a 0.4 per cent increase in May. It provided the first solid evidence to back the administration's claim that rampant inflation in early 1977 was due largely to the economic disruptions caused by extreme cold weather in the East, South and North and severe drought in the West.

DURING THE three months ended in June, the department said wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of 4 per cent compared with 10.2 per cent in the first quarter.

"Prices moved down in June for every major category of farm products except fluid milk," the department said.

"Prices fell more than in May for fresh and dried vegetables, grains, tea and oilseeds. Fresh fruits and cattle turned down sharply . . . prices for green coffee, plant and animal fibers, eggs and live poultry also declined."

Although roasted coffee prices increased, the drop in green coffee showed consumers may be in for a break on the cost of the popular morning drink.

PRICES ON PORK, cereal, and bakery products went up last month. Home construction materials, cars, furniture and a number of other products also went up — but not enough to offset the food drop.

Factory production has increased and idle plant capacity decreased significantly in the past three months. Farmers also are producing a record harvest.

Buried in June's favorable inflation news was discouragement for potential homeowners. Every category of material used in new home construction rose — including lumber, wallboard, plastics for plumbing and paints and metal for electrical wiring.

The report also said wholesale prices for other consumer-ready products such as cars, major appliances, mobile homes and household furniture rose in June. Prices for health products, clothing and drugs also rose.

But these price increases generally were more moderate than earlier months. The big drop in farm prices and lower prices for gasoline, which is in record surplus, more than offset the effect.

'Puts' newest investor maneuver

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — There's a jazzy new way to risk your money in Wall Street, and believe it or not it might have more lucrative possibilities for the conserative among us than for the gamblers.

For the Securities and Eschange Commission finally has let the other shoe drop: we are one month into a five-month pilot program in listed trading of "put" options. And if you don't really understand exactly what that means, relax: you're in excellent company. Indeed, if the average U. S. town held a square dance for all its inhabitants who truly understood "puts," the event could be held in a telephone booth — and still provide ample room for all the town's knowledgeable brokers on the subject.

Yet there is no great mystery about the basic tool involves: a "put" is simply the opposite of a "call." A call gives its buyer the right to buy a given stock at a given price within a given period of time. A put gives its buyer the right to sell a given stock at a given price within a given period of time. In either case, the expenditure of a relatively small sum gives the purchaser an option that could become immensely valuable very quickly — or could expire worthless at the end of the stated period.

MORE THAN FOUR years ago, the Chicago Board of Trade opened — amid considerabe industry skepticism — the naion's first listed options market. The key word is "listed;" until then, the individual investor could buy options from specialists in the field but had no effective way of reselling them: he either exercised his option or let it expire. This wasn't really fair; it gave the purchaser no benefit from a quick early move in his stock. On giving up the option, he received no extra payment for the potential further gains still left in it.

The American investor, who is by no means as stupid as he is commonly depicted, soon realized the extra advantages of the new listed market in calls — in which the options available are standardized, and readily resellable. It became an exciting new arena for investing — and one of the fastest-growing segments of the securities industry. This, despite that the stock market itself scarcely has been at its most brilliant in the intervening four years; indeed, it was higher in early 1973 than it is now.

But only one shoe had dropped: all the listed options trading was in calls (the right to buy stocks, not to seell them). Part of this is attributable to our American optimism: while the business traditionally was referred to as "puts and calls," the name should more correctly have been reversed; even before the listed trading began, calls outsold puts by a ratio of more than three to one.

BUT BALANCED investing required a full range of opportunities. And so, all five U. S. exchanges that have added call trading since 1973 have begun to offer put trading, too. Puts are available on a total of 25 stocks, and unless the experiment goes to pieces, that number will surely expand rapidly — as did the number of stocks on which listed calls were available.

While buying a put has been described as "betting that the stock is going down," in fact the most likely successful use of the option by the small investor will be quite conservative. Example: You buy 100 shares of XYZ at $30 per share, naturally hoping the stock will go up. But, as insurance, you also buy a six-month put on XYZ for, say, $300. This gives you the right to sell out at the price you paid, limiting your loss to the cost of the put, plus your commissions. Not fool proof — but definitely a short-term insurance policy.

The computers and the sharpies are hard at work figuring out some of the myriad potential uses of listed puts. But their most interesting possibility may be in providing a little more safety for the cautious individual. It's an option he may want to seize — even fi he hopes he'll never actually have to exercise it.

Davidsmeyer Bus Service keeps the family close and working hard

by LEA TONKIN

When Karen Bingham was a child, she attended a one-room school in central Illinois. But the school, near her home in Beardstown, was closed in a consolidation program.

"When that happened, we needed transportation," Mrs. Bingham recalls. "My parents, with a 1939 Chevrolet, started carrying us to school."

That was in 1947. For Karen's parents, Georgia and Norman Davidsmeyer, it marked the beginning of a transportation service which would eventually serve thousands of school children in the Northwest suburbs and vacationers traveling to distant points in the U.S.

"TWO YEARS LATER my parents got a 1949 Chevrolet and started taking more children to school," Karen said. "As more schools kept closing, they got used passenger school buses to carry more children. By the time they left Beardstown, they had five buses and a spare."

Greener pastures beckoned. The Davidsmeyers heard about the farmlands in Elk Grove Village, and prospects for further expansion of the bus service. The family business, now dubbed Davidsmeyer Bus Service, Inc., moved in 1960 to its present location at 2513 E. Higgins, Elk Grove Village.

The Davidsmeyers landed their first contract with Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59.

In 1963, the Davidsmeyer service was extended to special education students in the Northwest suburbs and other Chicago area communities. "We now operate 105 units — school buses — including backup units," Karen said.

Karen grew up with the business. She's secretary-treasurer of the school bus service, and treasurer of the family's Mid-America Coach Lines business.

EVERYTHING from general management and accounting to driving a school bus — in a pinch — is part of Karen's busy work schedule.

Her parents are active in the management and maintenance of the family business. Karen's husband, Richard Bingham, manages Mid-America Coach Lines.

The Bingham's son Bill, age 17, works in the maintenance shop and the couple's younger children, Rob and Kim, can't wait until they're old enough to drive a new school bus back from the factory.

"Our biggest challenge is the costs," Karen said. "There are gasoline, insurance, and other costs. You have to go back to the customers and recoup this. Every three years, we put our business on the line." That's how often the bus service must bid for school transportation contracts.

The family's Mid-America Coach Lines service was launched in 1970, when the Interstate Commerce Commission granted Davidsmeyer a permit to allow charters across state lines.

"WE TAKE TOURS all over the U.S.," Karen said. Nashville, Miami, New England and Banff, Canada, are amount popular destinations.

Karen takes pride in the fleet of modern buses used for the charter service.

FAMILY SPIRIT IS important in the management of Davidsmeyer Bus Service, Inc., says secretary-treasurer Karen Bingham. The Elk Grove Village family business also includes a charter bus line.

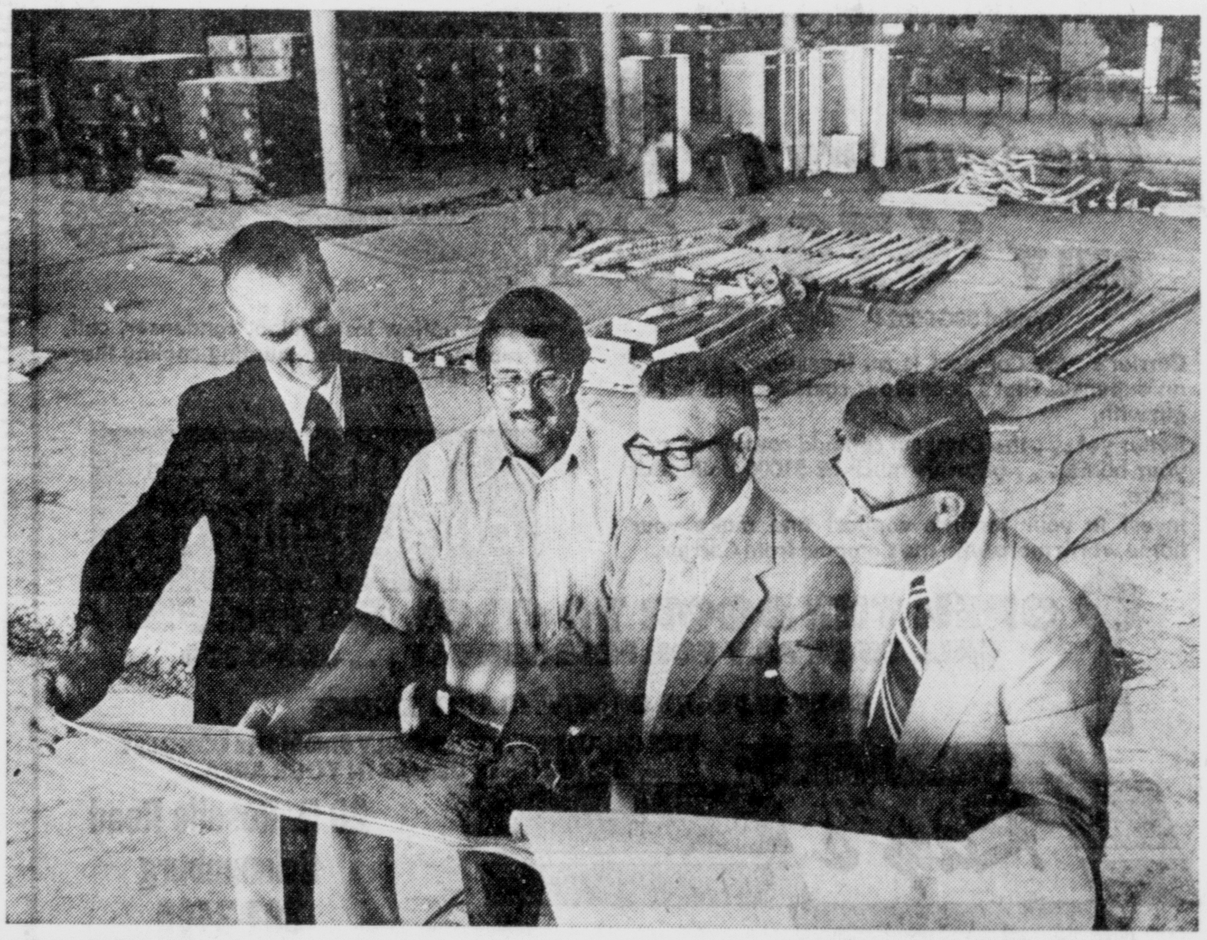

Groundbreaking held for bank

Groundbreaking ceremonies were conducted Friday for the Bank & Trust Co. of Arlington Heights' expanded facilities adjacent to its present 900 E. Kensington site.

W.C. Wolf, president of the Arlington Heights bank, said the bank's total office space will be 30,000 square feet when the addition is completed late in 1977. Six new drive-in banking stations will also be featured at the bank, in the Arlington Market shopping center.

Groundbreaking ceremony participants, in addition to Wolf, included John L. Frieburg Jr., bank executive vice president; James J. Cunningham Jr., bank director; and Barth Hansen and James Spalla of the Arlington Market Merchants Assn.

Main lobby and teller stations, personal banking offices, executive offices and the bank's travel department will be housed in the new quarters.

The 'ism' to conquer in 1980s is age-ism

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — Anita Bryant notwithstanding, this nation is moving slowly but perceptibly toward assuring civil rights for homosexuals. We have also come a long way toward guaranteeing civil rights for blacks, Chicanos, women, and other minorities.

So how about civil rights for the older person in American society? Rep. Claude Pepper (D-Fla.) argues that "age-ism is as odious as sexism or racism." He is author or co-author of two bills that would retain for the individual the option of whether he or she wants to retire at a given age. "The 1980s," predicts Jack Osofsky of the National Council on the Aging, "will be the civil rights decade for older people."

It is as much an economic as a civil rights issue because mandatory retirement at age 65 tends to waste an important resource. People are living longer, and medical science assures that increasing numbers of aged persons will be in relatively good health.

TO ADD STRENGTH and viability to the Social Security system, says former Administrator Robert M. Ball, "we had better give high priority over the next 30 years — before the crunch comes — to reversing the trand toward earlier and earlier retirement."

Pepper, chairman of a Select Committee on Aging, and private groups representing the elderly, of course want to see action now, not 20 or 30 years down the road. They argue persuasively that enforced separation from an active work status should be based on a person's competency — ability to perform — rather than automatically on attainment of a a given age.

Legislation now on the books bars discrimination in the private sector, because of age, only for those 40 through 64, and in the federal government through the age of 70. (There are some exceptions, as for airline pilots, where even earlier retirement can be forced. Mandatory retirement where it is a condition of a bona fide pension plan is also exempted.)

Pepper, along with Rep. Paul Findley (R-Ill.), has proposed eliminating the age limits, and retaining the basic exceptions. It would mean that someone 65 or over could not be given a pink slip just because of age. Legislation adding "age" to the Civil Rights Act banning discrimination for "race color, religion, sex, or national origin" is also being discussed.

NOT ALL experts in the "aging" field agree with this approach. Nelson Cruikshank, at 75 just appointed by President Carter as his chief adviser on aging problems, when asked by this reporter, said he thought doing away completely with the mandatory 65-year retirement rule might be "simplistic."

Cruikshank (himself living proof that age is no test of competence) thinks that union negotiattors can use the 65-year age limit "as a trade-off for decent pensions." Besides, Cruikshank argues, retirement policy can't be made in a vacuum, but must be related to the conditions in the labor market.

"What might make sense at full employment might be lousy with 8 or 9 per cent out of work," he observed.

Some also argue that mandatory retirment of the elderly opens up job slots that may be needed for younger persons. Osofsky, a private lobbyist for the aging, demurs. "You can't use the needs of one part of the population to take care of others," he says.

THERE'S A LOT OF emotion attached to the issue, Cruikshank acknowledges. "I'd rather think of 65 as the beginning of the age of benefits, rather than the age of retirement," he says.

In recent years, employers have tended to emphasize compulsory retirement at 65, coincident with federal tax encouragement of pension plans. Ball suggests that without compulsory retirement, there is no sure way in which a company can develop new executive leadership for its long-term future.

But Pepper's contention that any given retirement age is arbitrary, underming the mental health and outlook of the retiree, is sure to get increasingly serious attention in industry. Many companies are taking a new look at the economic implications of booting people out of their jobs, just because of age.

It is clear that under present rules with an aging population, the percentage of people paying into the Social Security system, compared to those taking the money out, will decline dramatically. More money is going to have to be put into the system. One way of easing that burden on corporate and individual taxpayers is to encourage people to stay on the job longer, instead of — quite literally — "severing" them as the calendar ticks off the 65th birthday.

Stocks at end of week mixed despite good news

by FRANK W. SLUSSER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market churned inconclusively this week despite government reports indicating the economy was progressing at a strong rate and inflation was on the decline.

Analysts said institutions, apparently fearing an economic slowdown sometime in the near future, were heavy sellers all week of so-called basic industry stocks.

This was one reason the Dow Jones Industrial Average, a 17.05-point loser last week, fell another 4.66 points to 907.99. The closely watched average has been locked in a trading range of 900 to 930 most of 1977. It also has been out of step with the rest of the market.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index shed .11 to 54.81 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, dipped .31 to 99.79.

ADVANCES TOPPED declines, 935 to 766, among the 2,075 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big board volume for the four-day Fourth of July holiday week totaled 83,652,070 shares, compared with 99,102,050 last week and 79,812,750 during the same week a year ago.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 97,737,911 shares, compared with 112,163,170 last week.

The stock market's uncertain movements this week matched the divided outlook for the economy among analysts in Washington, Wall Street and elsewhere.

Everybody seems to believe the economy — which registered a surprisingly sharp gain the first half of 1977 — was due to slow down. When and how much are the devisive debating points.

A DIP IN THE government's leading indicators and a 2.2 per cent drop in steel production last week reinforced concerns the economy might pause. But economists were quick to note one month doesn't set a trend.

The Commerce Dept. Tuesday said the U.S. economy has grown at the highest rate of any industralized nation in the world. Last week, the Carter administration said the Gross National Product would rise at a 5.1 per cent rate this year instead of 4.9 originally forecast.

Treasury Secy. M. Michael Blumenthal predicted inflation would decline to 6 per cent by early next year and unemployment would dip below 6 per cent.

With food categories showing a steep decline, June wholesale prices fell .6 per cent, their biggest one-month slide since September 1973 and the first in 10 months. The unemployment rate, however, rose .2 per cent to 7.1 per cent.

ONE ANALYST noted that while the farm price picture appeared to be good for the consumer, it was hurting the buying power of the farmer. It was not known immediately how much this would hurt the nation's over-all economy, however.

Meanwhile, the nation's basic money supply rose only $100 million in the latest week, compared with $1.5 billion the week before. The news eased fears of higher interest rates.

Record car sales seemed to confirm the conference board's latest survey showing consumer confidence has picked up recently. But Merrill Lynch downgraded auto stocks and a Wall Street Journal study revealed businesses think little of the consumer confidence surveys.

One basic industry stock, Dow Chemical, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, falling 1 7/8 to 31 7/8 on 1,224,700 shares. The firm said its second-quarter earnings won't show much improvement over last year's. Among the other chemicals, blue-chip Du Pont fell 1 7/8 to 114 3/8 and Monsanto dropped 2 3/8 to 67.

British Petroleum was the second most active issue, unchanged at 16 1/4 on 1,179,600 shares. Occidental Petroleum was third, unchanged at 23 7/8 on 956,600 shares.

Texas International gained 7/8 to 11 3/4 in heavy trading. The company said it didn't know of any internal reason for the interest in its stock. The company has a stake in a broad range of oil and gas activities.

S&L deposits insured by federal corporation

Moneywise

by Robert Edwards

Deposits in savings and loan association shareholder accounts insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. are protected to the same degree as savings in banks that are members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. A previous "Moneywise" column (Nov. 24, 1976) reviewed the performance of the FDIC in protecting bank savers. Since then several readers have wondered about FSLIC protections.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation was created in 1934 under the supervision of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Deposits in S&Ls that are members of the FSLIC are insured to $40,000 per account. At the end of 1975 insured depositors numbered 67 million with savings totaling $278.8 billion.

The FSLIC attempts to head off problems with insured institutions to avoid a receivership. The FSLIC may arrange a merger between a faltering S&L and a stronger one by assuming partial or full responsibility for problem loans. Default prevention also may take the form of a loan, a cash contribution, and/or the purchase of assets. The FSLIC's success in preventing defaults has been so successful that only 13 cases out of 116 FSLIC involvements eventually ended in a receivership since 1934. In all 945,289 individual investors have been protected through Sept. 30, 1976.

ANOTHER POINT of confusion concerns savers. Although FSLIC reserves totaled $4.4 billion as of September 1976, these represented only 1.38 per cent of insured savings. Suppose several big S&Ls failed simultaneously? Would the total obligations swamp the relatively small reserve fund? If an insured institution should be forced into receivership, all of the money to pay accountholders does not come from the FSLIC. Only a small increment of FSLIC funds is needed to supplement assets to pay off accountholders in a receivership. A loan may be necessary to buy time as loans are collected over a period of several years by the FSLIC or a surviving institution.

Another myth that persists is the "rotation" of payoffs. Under rotation an S&L accountholder was paid a portion of his account, typically $1,000, and his name went to the bottom of the list when an S&L could not meet demands for cash. When his name came up again, he received another partial payment. This procedure has not occurred among FSLIC-insured institutions since 1934.

About 2 per cent of deposits in institutions that later went into receivership have not been paid because account totals exceeded the insured limit. Many more cases occurred where FSLIC assistance kept the institution functioning and accountholders with amounts in excess of the limit were paid in full.

When an insured S&L enters receivership, accountholders are paid in full within two weeks up to the insured limit.

ACCOUNT TOTALS in excess of the insurance limits may be paid later when assets are sold or collected.

All federal savings and loan associations are insured by the FSLIC. State-chartered S&Ls may also be insured by FSLIC by looking for a sign signifying it is a member or by asking. Some states offer insurance protection for state-chartered S&Ls, but these are not a part of FSLIC.

Readers seeking more information may request two free pamphlets, "FSLIC-Safety" and "Questions and Answers Concerning Your Insured Savings." Both are available from the FSLIC, 320 First Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20552.

Dow down 1.52 in mixed market

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, torn by heavy institutional selling, closed out a disappointing week Friday with mixed results despite favorable economic news. Trading was heavy.

Several block trades of 100,000 shares or more indicated institutions were selling and accounted for New York Stock Exchange volume climbing to 23,820,000 shares from 21,740,000 Thursday.

Analysts said the selling apparently was triggered by fears the economy would slow down. "The economy's growth in the first half was so strong investors figure it has to slow down in the second half," one analyst said.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average of 30 stocks, up more than two points at the outset, fell 1.52 points to 907.99 and brought its loss for the week to 4.66 points. It gained 1.78 Thursday.

The New York Stock Exchange Common Stock Index shed 0.03 to 54.81 and the average price of a share lost three cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, fell 0.14 to 99.79.

ADVANCES, however, topped declines, 795 to 574, among the 1,874 issues crossing the composite tape.

Some early buying was sparked by the Labor Department's report of a 0.6 per cent dip in the government's Wholesale Price Index. It was the first decline in 10 months and steepest for any month in nearly four years.

Analysts said some traders may have been disappointed, however, that the June unemployment rate rose 0.2 per cent to 7.1 per cent. But employment rose to its highest level on record.

Wall Street was encouraged by the Federal Reserve Board's Report late Thursday that the nation's money supply rose only $100 million in the latest reporting week. Only the week before, the money supply soared $1.5 billion.

A NUMBER of observers noted the Dow Industrials were out of step with much of the rest of the market. The Dow Jones utilities average reached a new 1977 high by climbing 0.23 to 116.09. American Exchange and over-the-counter indices also reached new highs.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 27,661,530 shares, compared with 25,551,430 Thursday.

Technicare fell 3 1/8 to 37 3/4 in moderate trading after American Science & Engineering filed a $300 million patent infringement against the firm over sales and promotion of computerized tonographic scanners. American science climbed 1 3/8 to 11 on the American stock exchange.

Giant companies face pension squeeze

NEW YORK (UPI)—Major U.S. corporations have amassed nearly $50 billion in unfunded pension benefits which could impair their profits in future years, according to Business Week Magazine.

Among 83 large U.S. companies surveyed, General Motors Corp. had the largest amount of unfunded vested benefits with a gap of $3 billion, or 21 per cent of its net worth, Business Week said in its latest issue.

Other companies in the survey conducted for the magazine by Investors Management Services Inc., a subsidiary of Standard and Poor's are: Bethlehem Steel, with $1.284 billion in unfunded vested benefits; Chrysler Corp., $1.095 billion; Ford Motor, $970 million; Westinghouse Electric, $751 million; AT&T, $684 million; General Electric, $568 million; Uniroyal, $560 million; Republic Steel, $497 million; and National Steel, $458 million.

UNDER POWERS of ERISA, the Federal Pension Reform Act passed in late 1974, the government can take up to 30 per cent of a company's net worth to pay retirement benefits to employes if the pension fund is inadequate or terminated.

But some companies' net worth simply don't cover the pension benefits, the magazine said.

Lockheed, for example, has unfunded benefits equal to 166 per cent of its net assets, LTV's unfunded liabilities 108, and Uniroyal's 89 per cent.

If the companies were forced to have the funds in advance, this could dampen profits, Business Week said. General Motors, for example, would have to take two years of pre-tax profits to fully fulfill its pension obligations. But Chrysler would need 27 years' profits and Uniroyal, 12 years.

But most of the companies in the survey would require just over three months' pre-tax profits to fund their pension plans, according to the magazine.

Openings

The real estate department of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U.S. has leased a 74,000 square foot warehouse and office building in Elk Grove Village to Volvo of America Corp., said Cameron B. Estes Jr., regional leasing manager of the real estate department. The Swedish auto maker will maintain a parts inventory warehouse at the site, 1099 Estes, from which it will supply its franchised auto dealers in the Chicago area.

HomeCard™

The new savings account from Home Federal that saves a lot more than money.

It can save you time.

With HomeCard™ you can make deposits or withdrawals on your savings account at all Dominick's Finer Foods stores throughout the Chicago area.† Later, it is planned that more retail stores will participate and, of course, HomeCard™ can be used at all Home Federal offices. It makes a HomeCard™ account the most convenient, quickest and easiest-to-use savings account in Chicagoland.

It can save you trouble.

Here's another way your HomeCard™ puts you closer to your money when you need it. Once you've received your HomeCard,™ you can use it to cash a personal check at any Dominick's Finer Foods store throughout the Chicagoland area.†
That can be a big help when you're short of cash.

With HomeCard™ you can make every day count. Here's how. Your HomeCard™ account earns 5¼% interest, compounded daily, from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal. Now you can keep money in your savings account that you used to keep in cash, or in your checking account, and earn interest right up to the day you make your withdrawal.

It can save you confusion.

With HomeCard™ you get a quarterly statement mailed to you. It shows all of your transactions for that period, clearly identified as to where they were made—specific store location or Home Federal office—plus all the interest you've earned and your current balance.

It can save you embarrassment.

Your savings are always around when you need them as long as HomeCard™ is in your pocket or purse—even nights and weekends!
It's nice to know you're just a little better prepared for the unexpected.

HomeCard™

The savings account you carry in your pocket.

†To use your HomeCard™ for cash withdrawals at any Dominick's store, your withdrawal cannot reduce your HomeCard™ balance below $100. To cash your personal checks at participating stores with your HomeCard,™ your account must have a minimum $100 balance and sufficient cleared funds to cover your check. Withdrawals, including check cashing, limited to $200 per day, and $500 per week at participating stores.

Editor's note . . .

When police reporter Dann Gire isn't chasing after squad cars and fire engines he can usually be found teaching his two pet birds a few new tricks. It seems only appropriate that Dann should author an article in this week's Leisure that is strictly for the birds. It's about Ted Lafeber, a Niles veterinarian who specializes in bird medicine. Lafeber's abilities are so widely respected that patients are flown to his office from many parts of the country. One famous patient is Fred the Cockatoo, Baretta's TV pal. Page 3.

Diane Mermigas gives Leisure readers an inside look at the neighborhood art fair where the real name of the game is people watching. Diane, who is often a participating artist in area art fairs, reports on the various types of personalities frequenting the art fair circuit. Page 4.

Ichabod Crane and the headless horseman gallop through the pages of Travel this weekend. Travel editor Katherine Rodeghier writes about the historic homes of author Washington Irving's Sleepy Hollow country located near Tarrytown, N.Y. Page 8.

THE BIRDMAN OF NILES

Photos by Craig Camp
Story by Dann Gire

George the BB parrot was a hopeless case.

The little green-feathered bird had come down with a severe blood problem that was sure to be fatal — it was only a matter of time.

George's body was a mass of hemmoraged tissues. His eyes were swollen and undercoated with blood. His small head was saturated with internal bleeding. The bird couldn't walk well and was unable to recognize his own food.

George's owners took their small pet to a bird expert they heard worked at a Niles animal hospital. His name was Theodore Lafeber.

At first, even Lafeber felt the case was hopeless for the little feathered fellow, who was immediately placed on tube feeding and stuffed in a specially designed bird incubator.

Weeks passed, and eventually the entire Niles Animal Hospital staff became actively involved in keeping the little creature alive. That was nine months ago. Now, George the BB parrot is the hospital mascot who cheerfully rides around the office on the shoulders of doctors, nurses and receptionists.

"We literally raised this little fellow from the dead," Lafeber says with a proud note in his voice. "The staff lets him fly around the place. He's a very tame bird. If I were even to talk about getting rid of him, I know three employes who would quit on the spot."

But Lafeber won't get rid of George — he loves the creature as he loves his own two cockatiels, Macaw and Nanday Conure.

At 52, Lafeber is perhaps the world's leading authority on aviary medicine. His journal publications on the subject are numerous. He is writing the first textbook devoted exclusively to medical treatment of man's feathered friends.

Last month, he became the first American to be given the Melton Award in England for his research in bird medicine.

But that's not all.

Lafeber's abilities are so widely respected that he picks up patients from all over the United States and occasionally out of the country.

• Fred the cockatoo (Baretta's TV companion) was rushed to see Lafeber on an emergency flight from Toronto last year when the famous bird came down with an unknown sickness on the set. (Needless to say, Fred is still alive and well in his continuing career as a showbird.)

• The owner of a toucan, a brightly colored tropical bird, annually flies his pet in from New York City for a check-up in Niles. The owner trusts only Dr. Lafeber.

• In mid-June, a minister living in Indiana brought several grackles into Lafeber for check-ups and treatment. The birds had been purchased in Texas, their native habitat, and were being trained by the minister to appear in his magic act. What do grackles do in a minister's magic show? Little tricks like swallowing 6 or 7 inch long "swords," of course.

• Cook County Sheriff's police visit Lafeber occasionally with a shipment of fighting roosters they have confiscated from illegal cock-fighting operations in the Chicago area. These birds are usually in need of a great amount of care.

But despite his accomplishments, Dr. Lafeber manages a modest grin if someone calls him a leading expert in bird medicine. He prefers to say "It's true. I probably have a monopoly in the business."

Niles Animal Hospital was started by Lafeber in 1949. Then it treated dogs and cats. Through the years Lafeber developed an increasing interest in birds, their habits, problems and treatments. He officially broke into the bird field in 1960 when the president of the Animal Hospital Assn. appointed him to serve as chairman of a new committee — Aviary Medicine and Surgery.

"They must think I'm doing an OK job. I'm still the chairman," Lafeber says.

Now, the Niles doctor presents a four-hour national seminar every year on bird care. Every year more and more veterinarians attend. "I'm amazed at the interest. It's much more than for dogs and cats," he says.

It wouldn't be surprising if the heart that beats in Lafeber's body actually belongs to a bird. He lives, breaths, thinks, talks and pushes birds.

"Is a bird a companion pet? Yes, he is. A bird relates to you, can recognize you and functions very well in a home," Lafeber says.

"In the home, birds are superior pets over dogs and cats. Vocally, a bird communicates better than a dog can. A bird is a happy animal. His cheerful singing and hopping around can really raise your spirits.

"Birds have survived better through evolution than mammals. Their vision is better. They have a huge eye. They can scan a field and relate to it better than you or I ever could. Nobody can sneak up on a bird. They can see at wide angles," he says.

Lafeber who lives in Park Ridge said that if he is given a dog, cat and bird, all with the same problem, the bird will survive when the other two won't.

"Birds are the only animal you will ever have to put in your will," he said. "Parakeets and canaries live to be about 15. Cockatiels 25. Larger parrots such as cockatoos live anywhere from 50 to 75 years old. Birds are tough."

But if birds are so good as pets, why aren't there more bird-owners?

"Nobody pushes birds," Lafeber says. "They just don't get any good press."

But the fifteen staff members of the Niles Animal Hospital have been getting the "good press" for birds ever since they started working. As Lafeber puts it — "It isn't long before everyone here has a bird in their home."

The doctor is quick to point out that decor is another good reason to have birds around your house. "There is no life to a picture or ornament. It may be beautiful but a bird is living and also is beautiful," he says.

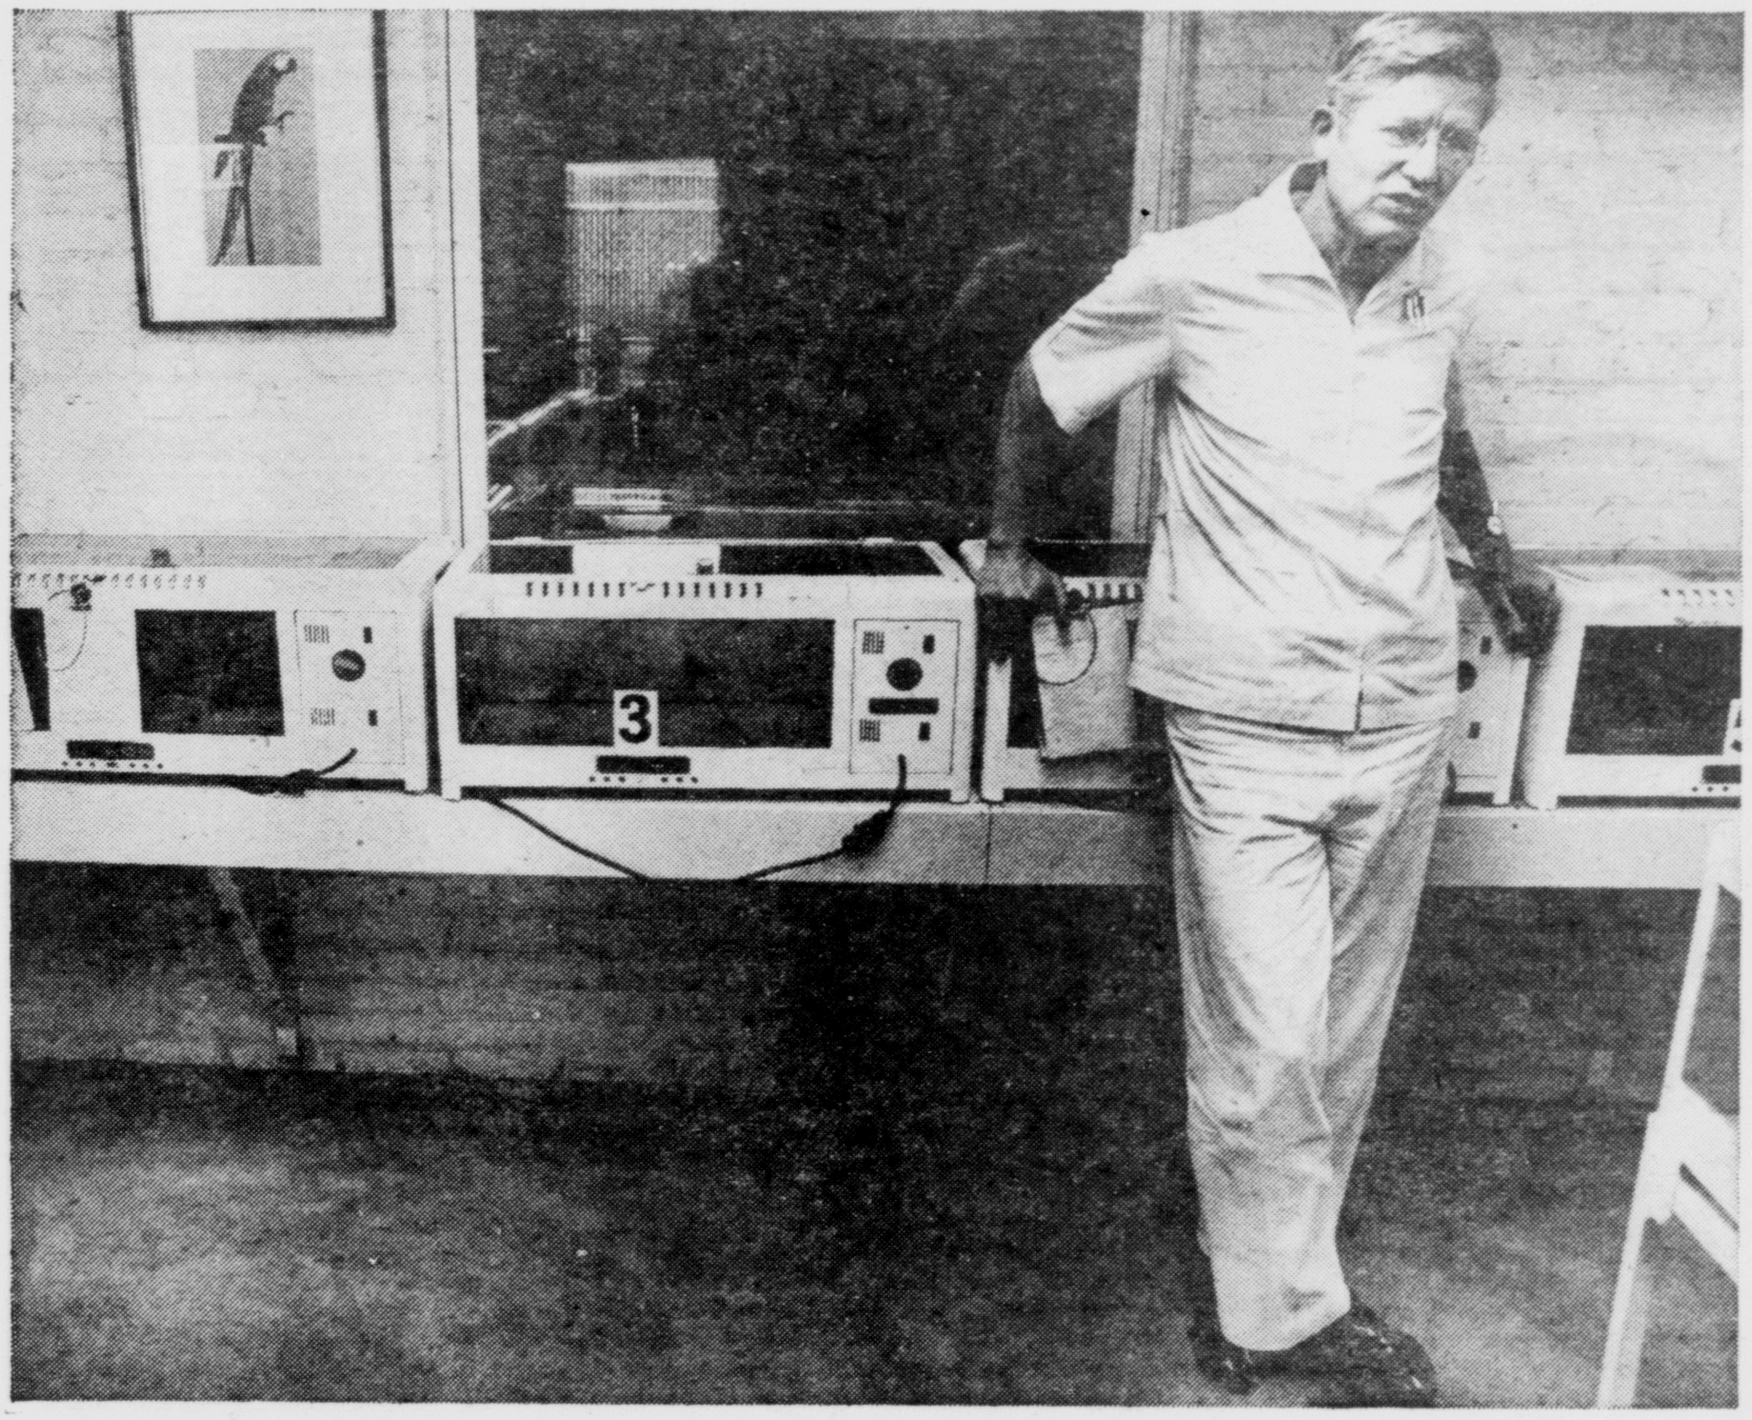

And when Lafeber isn't pushing birds, he's treating them with the help of his staff, some members of whom have been with him more than 25 years.

Donald Morlock, an administrator who has been with Lafeber since the beginning, "literally runs the hospital," according to the doctor. One of the hospital's newest arrivals is Dr. Richard Nye, who found his niche in life as a veterinarian after considering careers as a professional baseball player and a civil engineer. Nye, 32, played for more than five years with the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and the Montreal Expos.

Besides the major positions, part-time jobs are easy to fill at the animal hospital. Lafeber says they "never have trouble getting employes. College students, high school kids, they all flock to us. It's part of a healing situation here where you feel proud of what you're doing."

At the hospital, employes learn to deal with people as well as animals. For every pet there is a pet owner who is concerned

Games people play on the art fair circuit

'Give her a little item for a few dollars that she can hang on her kitchen wall — maybe something with a mushroom or a flower — and she'll be happy'

by Diane Mermigas

The wrinkles in the man's brow and his long, double chin gave his face the appearance of a basset hound. His big, brown, sad looking eyes stared out at the oil paintings on display without a wink's interruption.

The wind tossing about his graying hair didn't seem to break his thought. Then, finally, from his motionless stance came a "Hum," followed by a "Do you really do this work for a living?"

"No," the artist replied, "just part-time. I'm an accounts executive but, I like to get out and do something different on the weekends."

"Very good," said the man and strolled off into the crowd of sidewalk bargain hunters and Saturday afternoon art lovers.

Only at the neighborhood art fair can one be treated to a wide variety of personalities and appearances. The maze of exhibits that line the sidewalks and shopping center malls offer a microcosm of society where the passersby get a good look at the arts and crafts, and the artists get a better look at the human race.

The study and making of mental notes of people passing by is something that every serious and weekend artist learns to do in order to widdle away the hours on the art fair circuit. It becomes a game, a challenge and an obsession to see if you can digest the makings of each mysterious patron that comes along before they disappear into the steady stream of walkers.

'The biggest question that some people have is which direction they should survey the arts and crafts exhibits . . . People love to touch and pick things up, ask questions and talk . . . The artist seems to leave at day's end with more than he bargained for.'

One elderly gentleman walks up to a group of paintings and says he's sure he's seen the scene in the picture somewhere before.

"Don't tell me, let me guess. Fond du Lac, Wisconsin — that ridge just beyond the big lake up there, right?"

"Wrong," you are thinking, only you don't tell him that. You just shake your head and let him think what he wants to. Maybe this bronzed soul with the steady hands, who is probably a fisherman, will buy the painting.

Two talkative matrons walk up to another exhibit. "Oh, that's macrame," one observes, obviously out to impress the other. "Why my grandmother used to do that all the time."

"No, I think maybe you're thinking of crochet," the other woman replies, and they turn to carry their conversation elsewhere, fingering items at each exhibit as they make their way down the street.

A child plops down on his knees and stretches his neck in a look upward — hardly the preferred position for looking over art.

"What's that, Mom," he wonders aloud. "I could do better than that. I think that's ugly." The fast-melting ice cream cone which this ungrateful child has in his hands begins to drip all over, splattering dabs of what looks to be "Rocky Road" all over.

It must be close to 90 degrees with no shade from the sun's penetrating rays, and your temper is short anyway. You're just about ready to put fear into the youngster's heart when his mother steps in and wisks him away.

Other freckle-nosed youngsters, with toys or candy in hand, can stand for minutes gazing at the art work on display — finding the colors in the paintings or the shapes of sculpture, pottery and woodwork fascinating. But, their concentration is short.

They turn their head slightly, flash a glance into your eyes, force an uncertain smile and disappear behind their mother or father.

Mom and dad ultimately prove to be far more challenging customers. Aggressive salesmanship is hardly worth the effort, because no matter what the price of the work, if people like something enough they will buy it without prodding. But, few will argue against the use of subtle persuasion.

When a middle-aged woman walks up to your display and stares with a blank expression at one of your art works for 15 minutes, you can be sure she's interested. Either that, or she's fallen asleep on her feet with her eyes wide open.

"Can I help you, Madam," you ask in a soft tone, afraid of disturbing what seems to be a happy state of passivity.

"Well, you know, I'm thinking about buying this," she says, smiling and peering at you over the top rim of her eyeglasses. The customer has come to life.

"I think it would go perfectly over the sofa in my living room. I'm just not sure how the colors will blend with everything else," she says, considering and reconsidering as if the fate of the human race rested heavily on her decision.

Tact is the key here. Before the afternoon is over, you could have her believing that it is not only right, but that it would be the mistake of her life if she left that art work behind. The application of sure but discreet prodding wins you the sale.

"Good," you are thinking to yourself. "Now I've made a sale, I've covered the cost of my application fee for this fair. Now, I can pack up and go home and catch some rays in the backyard with the barbecue going."

Wrong. Greed takes hold of your senses and you're suddenly thinking that one more sale would mean a profit for the day, no matter how small. You decide to stay.

Laying back into your folding lawn chair you grab another homemade chocolate chip cookie from the brown bag lunch you packed and a can of soft drink and resume your observations on mankind.

Roughing it on the art fair circuit.

While the people are busy scrutinizing the art work on display, you're busy scrutinizing the people.

It's sort of the same principle as walking through the zoo. You're tempted to give a good once over to any of the animals in their cages, but you never dare stare at the monkeys and apes, because they stare right back. They are the ones on display, and yet you can't help but wonder what they are thinking about you.

A young mother with one babe in arm and a child by the hand cruises past the displays. Obviously, she doesn't have a lot of money to spend. All the money these days is going for disposable diapers and baby food. She's not the likely type to pay much attention to the big, brassy art.

But, it would be kind of nice to take something little home, she's thinking, and that makes her one of the many interested in the trinketville aspect of the art fair. Give her a little item for a few dollars that she can hang on her kitchen wall — maybe something with a mushroom or a flower on it — and she'll be happy.

Ah, but here comes a man of the world, a real talker who wants to know everything about the art work you do.

"Why don't you tell me how you do that," the young man with fire-engine red hair pleads. In the interest of art, and because you have nothing better to do, you offer a quick explanation of your work. You finally learn he's a college student studying physics who is better at asking questions than carrying on a conversation.

He leaves about 20 minutes later with one of your smaller, less expensive works wrapped and tucked under his arm. He's happy, you're happy and now you're back to watching the activity.

It's easy to generalize about people when you've been on the art fair circuit only half a season. No matter if it's in the city or suburbs, a few things are the same wherever you go.

The biggest question that some people have is in which direction they should survey the arts and crafts exhibits. Do we walk this way or that way? Do we follow the rows or do we defy the popular movement?

The bulk of expressionless "hums" and the approving smiles of "very goods" come mainly from a largely overweight, pregnant cross-section of people. Maybe it's just the perspective you get sitting on your haunches behind your display stall, but an observation never-the-less.

People love to touch and pick things up, ask questions and talk. They talk about their families, their children, their basements that they only clean up twice every five years. They talk about trips they've taken and the work they do. The fresh air and carefree stroll seems to be a therapy for some, a mental and physical rejuvenation for others.

And, in the long run, the artist seems to leave at the day's end with more than he has bargained for. He's been privy to a sideline view of this game we call living and gains a better understanding of the players involved.

"Come on, Poopsie," a tailored, well-kept woman with white hair calls to her leashed poodle. "Oh, Poopsie, look at this one. Isn't Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"Rollercoaster" — A good cast coasts through the unconvincing but mildly diverting thriller about a maniac extorting money by putting bombs on amusement park rides. (PG).

"Sorcerer" — Big, colorful, but impersonal suspense thriller about four outcasts trucking nitroglycerine through a South American jungle. Roy Scheider gives a strong performance, the visual effects are vividly convincing, and the tension groans to hair-raising proportions. But director William Friedkin forgets to clearly unravel the story as he manipulates your pulse. (PG).

ARLINGTON — Arlington Heights — 255-2125 — "Sorcerer" (PG).

CATLOW — Barrington — 381-0777 — "The Sting" (PG).

MOUNT PROSPECT CINEMA — Mount Prospect — 392-7070 — Theater 1: "Rescuers" (G); Theater 2: "Empire of the Ants" plus "Teenage Graffiti."

DES PLAINES — Des Plaines — 824-5253 — "Rockey" (PG).

ELK GROVE — Elk Grove — 593-2255 — "Annie Hall" (PG).

Birdman:

"We're fortunate here. We deal with a special kind of person, a pet owner. The kind of person who owns a pet is usually a giving person, not a self-centered one. So we have few problems with either our patients or their owners," Lafeber says.

And what goes for the pet owners goes for the pet doctor. Despite the demands on his time, Lafeber is always available to those who need him. His patient may be a mere $4.95 parakeet, but that little bird will get the same care and attention Fred the cockatoo did.

And if there is such a thing as a "bird-side manner," Lafeber has it. Even on the busiest days at the hospital, Lafeber or an assistant will take the time to explain bird psychology and behavior (in simple English) so new bird owners can better appreciate their pet. And for owners of sick birds, every effort is made by the staff to ensure the pet gets the proper treatment in the home.

Even after 28 years in the business, Lafeber radiates enthusiasm and concern for the little creatures he has studied so long. He is a man for whom no question is too stupid to answer when it comes to caring for birds.

Ironically, Lafeber admits the real meat and potatoes of his business is derived from dog and cat patients, although his bird traffic is substantial. "I'm not a bird specialist. I'm just an ordinary vet with a special interest in birds," Lafeber asserts. "A specialist devotes his time to only one field. I am involved in several."

Besides running a hospital, publishing and conducting seminars, Lafeber also serves as health consultant for many of the large pet store chains operating in the Chicago area. Almost every pet shop in the Northwest suburbs has Lafeber listed as its health consultant. He gets the call when something goes wrong.

"There's not a day goes by when I don't get a long-distance call from somewhere in the nation from someone with a bird problem," Lafeber says. "Of course, it's difficult to be precise when you can't see what you're talking about, but I do the best I can."

Dr. Lafeber's reputation is so great, that even his failures will not diminish his popularity with bird owners.

One Northwest suburban couple for example, brought their ailing parakeet to Lafeber after the bird's condition worsened under the care of another veterinarian.

The veterinarian admitted he was not very familiar with aviary medicine, so Dr. Lafeber was called in on the case.

The doctor determined the bird was starving to death because his digestive system was blocked, keeping food from entering the stomach. Unfortunately, it was too late. After an overnight stay at Lafeber's hospital the bird died.

"We were distraught for several days," the young wife said. I feel if we had only found Dr. Lafeber sooner, we might have been able to save out pet. It anyone would have, it would have been Dr. Lafeber." § that lovely? Maybe mommie will buy it."

Well, as it was, the dog never responded and mommie didn't buy it. The dog gave a good tug on the other end of the leash and took off with his master trailing behind him.

Teens passing by are momentarily impressed with the art they see and offer a sustained "Ooh" and "Ah." There are also middle-aged couples who pause only long enough to pass judgment.

"Henry, I just don't care for this at all," one woman declares. And Henry doesn't say anything at all. He figures there's no sense in debating the merits of art there on the sidewalk. He just offers the artist a reassuring smile and follows his wife along.

When one tires of the parade of Saturday strollers, you can always turn your interest to the artists participating in the show. They are as varied and strange as the wares they are selling.

Some don't eat unless their paintings sell. They are nomads who drift from one fair to another each weekend and live out of their van. The others are "sometimes" artists — retired persons who have discovered a new outlet for their talents and energy, young married couples who are fortune hunting in their spare time and college students who figure they can make a few bucks that will help pay their bills.

Yet, they all set up and take down their displays at each art fair, load and unload, learn to swallow the dejection of not selling anything at all and share in the job of having a productive day outdoors. They battle the elements jointly.

They protect their wares against the rain and prop their display stands up against the defiant north wind. They shade themselves from the hot sun with umbrellas and visors, and they learn to become fond of the fresh air.

They are all part of the visual circus that every art fair becomes with its street food vendors and over-the-table fortune tellers mixed in. But, these homespun Picassos have gathered by choice to set up their wobbly, homemade display stands and pander their goods outdoors.

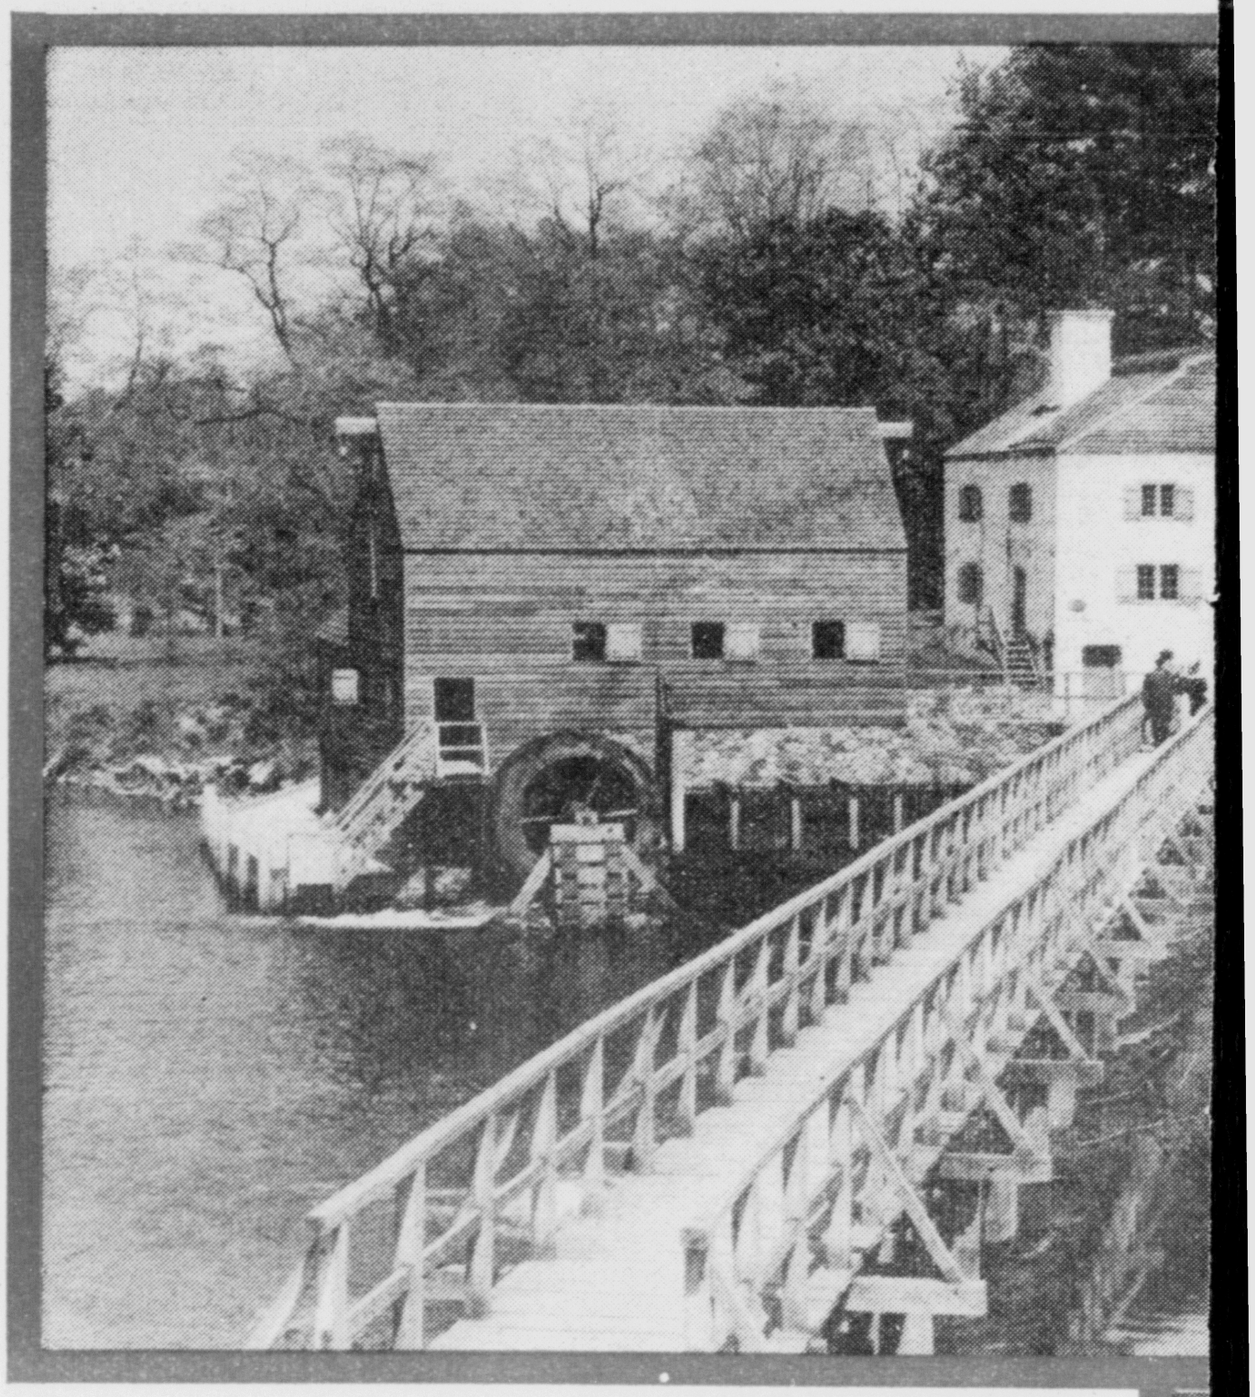

You can always read a book or a newspaper, play backgammon or checkers, or even set up a little workshop on the premises to impress and interest those passing by. But, there's nothing quite like engaging in a little people-watching.

The art fair circuit often is a bittersweet experience for the artist, but there aren't too many other experiences like it that offer sort of a one-way mirror look at people.

That kind of outward and inward glancing doesn't come by dozing in your backyard hammock where you keep thinking where you'd rather be. But, you wouldn't want to miss the chance to get in there and rub elbows with all kinds. Besides, you come out of it knowing yourself a little bit better. §

Restored homes awaken history of Sleepy Hollow

Life slumbers along as it has for centuries in this quiet Dutch community on the Tappan Zee

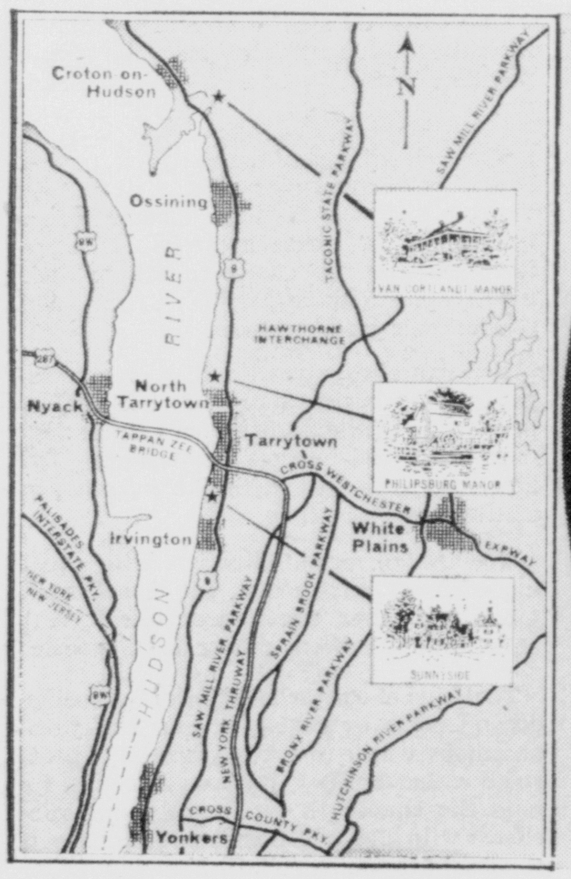

by Katherine Rodeghier

Almost any grammar school child can tell you about this place in the valley of the Hudson River. This is where the headless horseman chased Ichabod Crane through the night and where Rip Van Winkle took forty winks under a tree and awoke 100 years later..

The place is known as Sleepy Hollow, a name coined by author Washington Irving, one of the more noteworthy residents of this quiet Dutch community just an hour's drive north of New York City.

Irving's home and two other historic homes near Tarrytown, N.Y., are open to the public, owned and administered by Sleepy Hollow Restorations, a non-profit educational corporation that is chartered by the University of the State of New York. The corporation was founded in 1951 through financial assistance of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller estate, is also located in Tarrytown.

The three homes, spanning three centuries of American life, have each been restored in the style of the most significant period in their history. There's Irving's home, Sunnyside, restored to its appearance in the 1800s when the author lived there, Philipsburg Manor, a 17th Century grist mill and trading complex in the North Tarrytown and the Van Cortlandt Manor, a Revolutionary War era manorial estate in the nearby community of Croton-on-Hudson.

All three historic homes are located within 11 miles of each other. The southernmost is Irving's Sunnyside, perhaps the most popular of the three since it was Irving who popularized the area in his "Legends of Sleepy Hollow."

"Sleepy Hollow" is Irving's translation of the Dutch phrase "Die Slapering Haven" which literally means "the sleeping harbor." It was the name given to a small bay on the Hudson River's east bank. The bay, at the confluence of the Hudson and Pocantico Rivers, is a calm, wide body of water that is still known locally as the Tappan Zee.

Irving was an immensely popular 19th Century personality both in his native America and in Europe and he was America's first important author. Named for George Washington, about whom he later wrote a five-volumne biography, Irving was born in 1783 in New York City where he studied law and passed the bar, but developed most of his energies to writing essays and satires.

"Diedrich Knickerbocker's History of New York," a satirical work on early New York history, won Irving his first renown. In the satire, New York City was first called Gotham and the character of Father Knickerbocker was created. By 1820 Irving had completed his most famous volume, "The Sketch Book" which contained The Legend of Sleepy Hollow and Rip Van Winkle.

It was in Sleepy Hollow Country where Irving spent the last 25 years of his bachelor life. In 1835 Irving bought Sunnyside, then a one story stone cottage just a stone's throw from the Hudson. Irving called the home his "snuggery" and under the author's direction the cottage, which dates back to the 1600s, took on the singular architectural shape which reflected its owner's humor and whimsey. Sunnyside is surely one of the most picturesque homes in America, a strange mixture of an early Dutch farmhouse, an Amsterdam townhouse and pure Irving. The author had the house enlarged, endowed it with crow steps outlining the roof, added a steepled ice house, weather vanes and a three-storied pagoda wing which gives the house a fairytale look. The wing was added to provide guest rooms for Irving's many celebrated visitors.

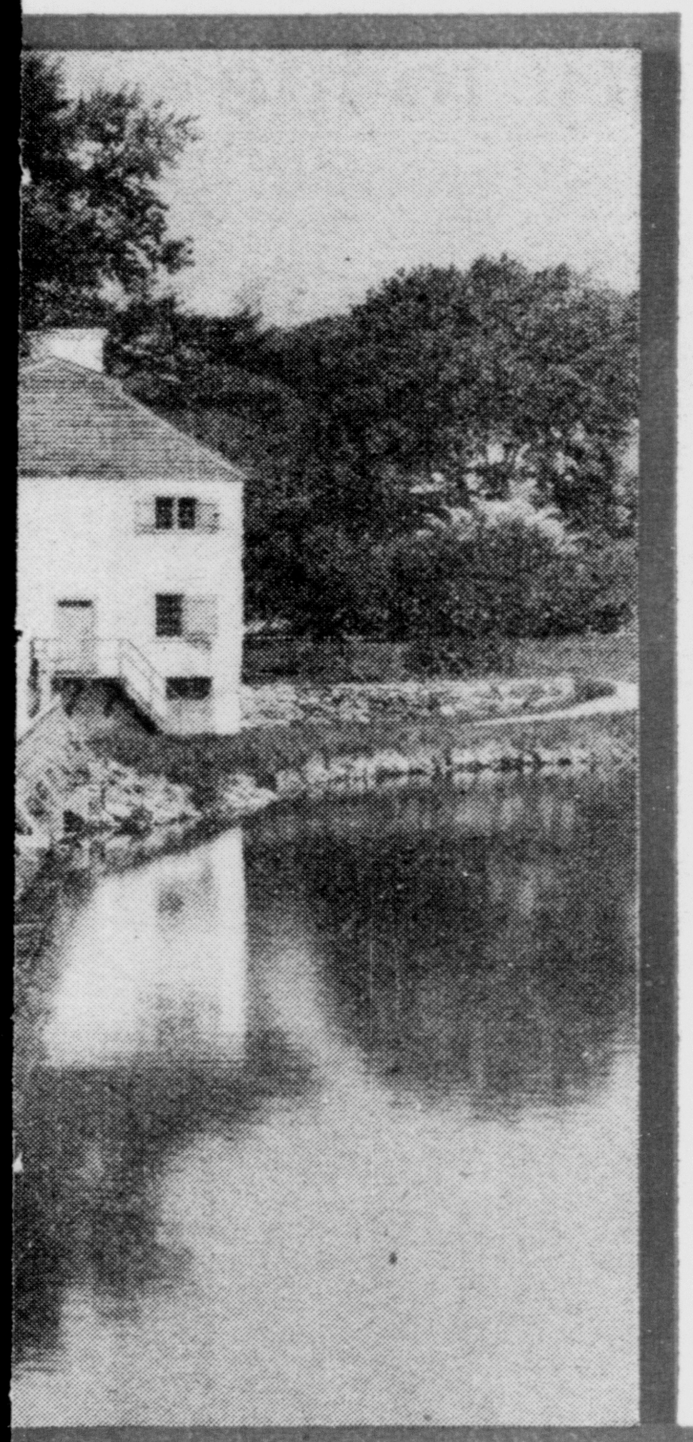

In Irving's own words Sunnyside is "a little old-fashioned stone mansion, all made up of gable-ends, and as full of angles and corners as an old cocked hat...Though but of small dimensions, yet like many small people, it is of mighty spirit, and values itself greatly on its antiquity, being one of the oldest edifices, for its size, in the whole country."

Sunnyside sits amidst 20 acres which, aside from harboring a small army of trees, has numerous pathways some of which were laid out by Irving himself. There are orchards and gardens and a pond created by Irving for his water supply, a body of water which the author dubbed "Little Mediterranean," Ducks and swans still inhabit it.

On his estate Irving was a gentleman farmer, gardener, architect and probably the most famous writer of his era. His home was visited by the great writers of the day — Emerson, Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes and others. At night they often sat in the parlor where Irving would entertain on the flute accompanied by his nieces on a rosewood piano.

Irving's home still contains the author's 3,000-volume library, his massive desk and many of his personal possessions. The dining room table is set with his china for dessert while the bedroom, where he died at the age of 76 still contains his bed, robe, cane and shaving stand.

Just up the Pocantico, about three miles north of Sunnyside, is Philipsburg Manor, a group of structures including a 200-foot-long stone and oak dam, a grist mill with a wharf and granary and a two-story Manor House.

Holland. He came to the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam about 1650 to begin his life in the colony as a carpenter for Governor Peter Stuyvesant. Through a combination of industriousness and favorable marriage Philpse quickly accumulated wealth and under British rule he became one of the wealthiest men in the New World.

The Manor House was an unpretenious structure near the millpond. It had three levels, the upper two being one room wide and two rooms deep and the lower level, built into the side of a slope, was one large room, half kitchen and half storeroom. Frederick's son, Adolph, duplicated the original architectural plans thereby doubling the size of the house by giving each main floor four rooms. On his death the manor passed to a nephew, Frederick II, who was a justice of the Supreme Court of the colony, one of three to preside at the trial of Peter Zenger. The golden years of the manor came to an end during the Revolutionary War when the property was owned by Frederick III. Because he remained loyal to the British, he was ordered banished from New York and his property confiscated and sold at public auction.

The house passed through several hands until 1940 when John D. Rockefeller, Jr. purchased the property. Teams of historians and archaeologists worked for several years on the site until the property was returned to its appearance of 1720-1750. The Restored Philipsburg Manor encompasses about 20 acres. The Manor House with its period furnishings, and the gristmill with its massive milestones, water wheel and wooden gearing recall Colonial American in its earliest days. The water-powered gristmill operates just as it did in the early 1700s turning out fresh cornmeal daily under the guidance of its English-born resident miller. There is an 18th century barn stocked with farm and handicraft implements of the colonial period plus a modern reception center across the pond which houses an exhibit room and theater. Visitors view a 15-minute film titled "Lords of the Manor" which traces the 300-year history of Philipsburg. The famed Old Dutch Church is located near by.

Lying north of Philipsburg Manor were the enormous land holdings of the Van Cortlandt Manor which occupied some 200 square miles in New York extending from the Hudson River to Connecticut. This was home to the Van Cortlandt family for more than 200 years. In the late 18th Century Pierre Van Cortlandt was master of the Manor. An ardent American patriot during the Revolutionary War, Pierre became the first lieutenant governor of New York State when it was founded in 1777 His son Philip was a colonel in the American army and commanded the Second New York Regiment. At the end of the war he was a brigadier general and later served in Congress. During the war Benjamin Franklin and Lafayette stayed at the manor.

This period, the late 1700s, is the period to which the manor has been restored. The Manor house is a practical and handsome home with a railed veranda extending around three-quarters of the second story. On the lower level is the original stone house dating to the 1680s where there is a large kitchen with huge fireplace, beehive oven and table. Adjoining it are the Milk Room used for storage and the Old Parlor where the family enjoyed informal living and dining.

The main level of the house, above the kitchen, is entered through a massive Dutch door. Here are the dining room, the parlor and two bedrooms. The Parlor's Queen Anne table is usually set for tea while a New York Chippendale sofa and distinctive Chippendale secretary stand nearby. In the dining room there are rare porcelain figurines and a late 17th Century William and Mary gateleg table.

An orchard and vegetable and flower gardens are laid out in typical 18th Century patterns along the Manor's renowned 750-foot red brick Long Walk which connects the Manor House to the Manor's Ferry House.

Law in the 1700s required the socially and politically prominent Van Cortlandts to operate a ferry across the Croton River and provide lodging and dining facilities for travelers of the Old Albany Post Road. Meals were served in the Ferry house's Common Room. Also in the Ferry House were several bedrooms, some of which were used in dormitory-style. Food was prepared in the Ferry House Kitchen, a one room brick building with a high, tiled fireplace and a beehive oven.

All three of the Sleepy Hollow homes have been designated Registered National Historic Landmarks. Each is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day of the year except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. Admission to each home is $2.25 for adults and $1.50 for children age 6 to 14 and for senior citizens. A combination ticket for all three homes is $5.75 and $3.75.

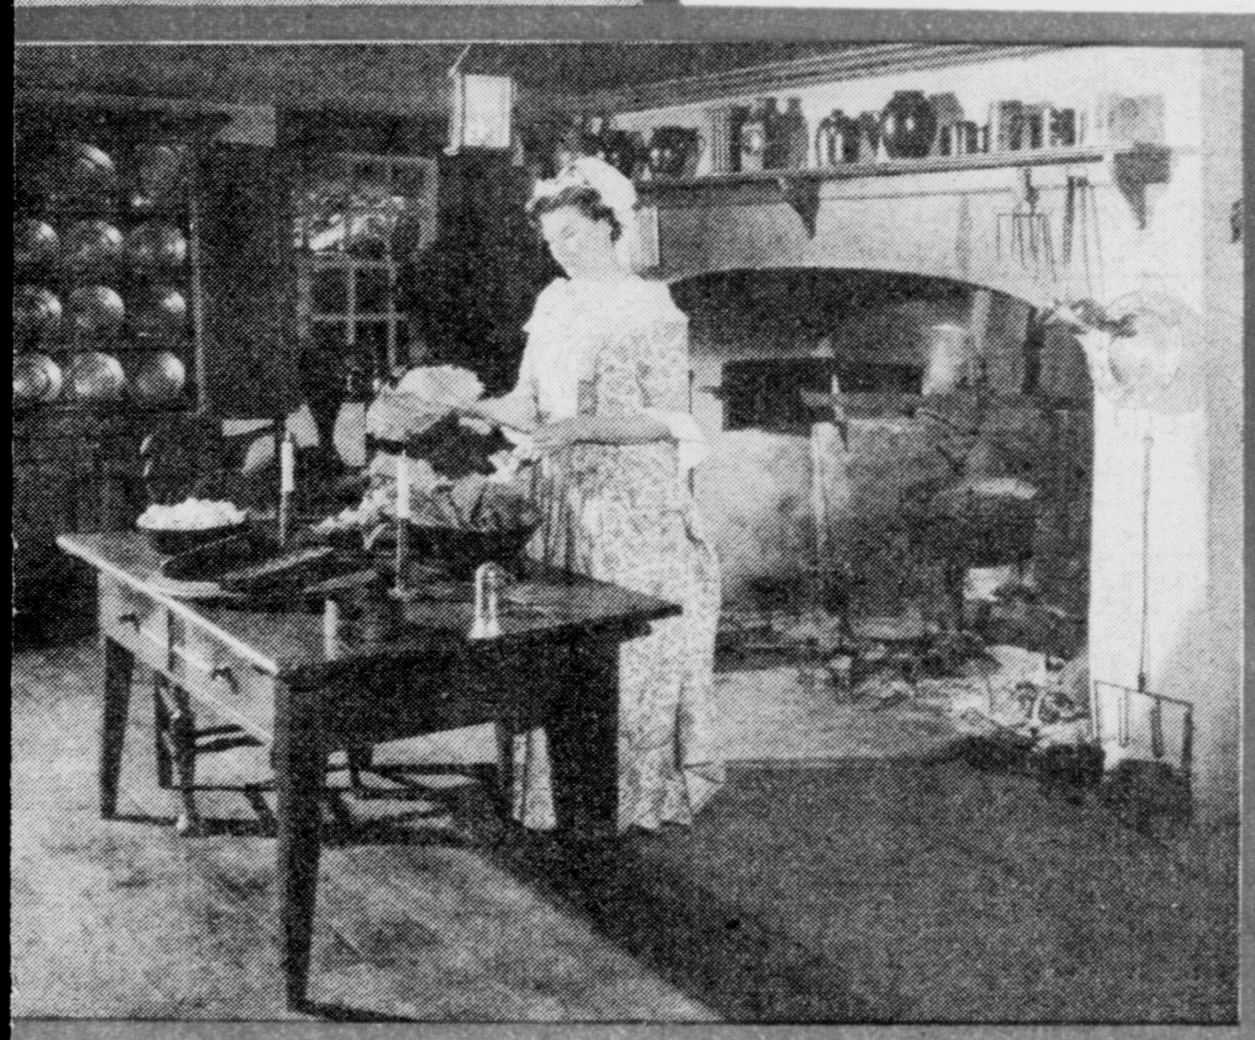

Each of the sites has a scenic shaded picnic grove and ample parking for cars, buses and recreational vehicles. Within the area are a wide selection of American and foreign-style restaurants as well as hotel, motel and campsite accommodations.

A number of special events are held at the homes at various times of the year. This year on Sept. 7, 14 and 21 there will be a Horticulture Tour of the formal gardens at Van Cortlandt Manor that will be given by the buildings and grounds director. During the weekends in October a special film of the legend of Sleepy Hollow, designed especially for children in the Halloween spirit, will be shown at Sunnyside. The annual Autumn Crafts and Tasks Festival will take place the last two weekends in October at Van Cortlandt Manor. Craftsmen in period costume will demonstrate the different skills that characterized house and farm labor of the 18th Century as residents prepared for winter. During December and the first week in January the three homes will take turns playing host to candlelight tours from 5 to 9 p.m. Philipsburg Manor is now showing an exhibition containing historic memorabilia of the prominent Philipse and Van Cortlandt families which illustrates the consequences of their opposing political voices during the Revolutionary War period. The free exhibition will continue throughout the remainder of the year.

Near the Sleepy Hollow homes is another historic building, Lyndhurst, the Gothic Revival mansion built for William Paulding, mayor of New York City in the 1830s. On 67 acres overlooking the Hudson, the mansion contains books and furnishings and bits of nostalgia. Guided tours are $2.25 for adults and $1.25 for children and senior citizens. During the summer months symphony concerts are given on the Lyndhurst grounds on Saturday evenings for $3 to $4 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Sleepy Hollow Country is accessible by air, rail and bus from New York City and it is crossed by I-87 between New York and Montreal and I-95 between Boston and Washington D.C.

Information and travel planning assistance is available from Sleepy Hollow Restorations, P.O. Box 245, Tarrytown, N.Y. 10591 phone 914-631-8200. §

Summer theater brings Illinois history to life

If you've ever entertained notions of eavesdropping on the famous and not-so-famous folks who contributed to the historic tapestry of old Illinois, this summer's selection of interesting theater events might well make your fantasies come true.

And it won't entail scampering aboard some intergalactic, fizmatic time machine. In fact, all you do is get a ticket and watch as everyone from a cigar-chomping U.S. Grant, lanky Lincoln and a church founder named Smith parade across a variety of stages and outdoor sets to chronicle what may well be a unique thespian portrait of the 19th Century prairie.

Held at, or near, the towns where the events supporting each play actually took place, these summer theater productions feature mostly veteran performers. What's more, each play offers the weekend traveler a veritable jamboree of nearby recreation and historic sites, making a visit to the theater a convenient excuse for an abbreviated family get-away; sort of like catching two birds with one tank of gas.

One of the plays takes place in Galena. Here old Victorian mansions, tiered streets and dozens of antique shops dish up a natural dramatic treat as the little town highlights a performance reflecting the life and times of President U.S. Grant. Produced and performed by the Chautauqua Players at the old

New Salem Village State Park, scene of the play, "Your Obedient Servant, A. Lincoln."

Weekend

Gallery Playhouse, "Ulysses S. Grant in Galena" offers its unusual treatment of a familiar subject every Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Sunday visitors can attend the play at 6:30 p.m. Matinee performances are slated each weekend at 3:30 p.m.

Besides treating its subject in the traditional light of the Civil War and the political environment of the White House, "Grant in Galena" does something special for the image of a man most often visualized as a colorful and often unkempt Union bluecoat who looked more like a slouchy infantry corporal than a brilliant commander of thousands. The play details Grant's life from a clerk in his family leather goods store to his return from Washington and the writing of his memoirs.

Admission to the Gallery Playhouse is $4 for adults, $2.50 for students and senior citizens and $10 for family groups. For ticket information, call: (815)777-1777. Performances will be held through October 30.

Farther south and located on a gentle bend in the Mississippi as it courses around the western edge of Illinois, is Nauvoo and the site of another historic theater production.

Once the home of thousands of Mormons under the leadership of their church founder Joseph Smith, Nauvoo was Illinois' largest city during the mid-1800's. The thriving commercial center was a far cry from what it is now — a sleepy riverside hamlet of restored homes, vineyards and a colorful ethnic heritage that includes German and French settlers.

Beginning Aug. 9, however, and continuing through the 15th, the tiny community explodes with a dazzling outdoor pageant that dramatizes the pioneer struggles and events which occurred during Nauvoo's "golden age." Performed for the first time last year, "City of Joseph" drew a crowd of 27,000 to its musical panorama of early prairie lifestyles on the Illinois frontier.

"Called the "Williamsburg of the West," Nauvoo's old sites include the refurbished homes of Brigham Young, Joseph Smith and famed gunsmith Jonathon Browning.

The play is a bargain, too. It's free. If you drive, don't fret about being greeted with a hefty parking charge. That's free, too.

There's also no charge for touring the restored Mormon homes and 19th Century shops.

Illinois' most famous resident leaps out of the history books once again this year as the Kelso Hollow Amphitheater in New Salem State Park begins ticket sales for the play, "Your Obedient Servant, A. Lincoln."

Produced, written and directed by a troupe of young artists from the University of Illinois, the play weaves authenticated speeches, letters and historic records into a drama which at once gives the visitor a perspective of heritage as well as a sense of personal involvement in the life and times of one man and his era.

Eleven cast members, most of whom portray various characters throughout the play, take you on a tour of Lincoln's life and career. The drama takes place on a multilevel outdoor stage which is dominated by a huge color portrait of Lincoln. The wooden assemblage of ramps and staggered pilings suggests at various times a New Salem cabin, a Civil War battle, a flatboat churning down the Sangamon River and the solitary moments of Lincoln in his White House chambers.

As with other Illinois historic plays, "Your Obedient Servant, A. Lincoln" is staged only a few hundred yards away from the actual buildings which spawned the main character's career. Located northwest of Springfield, New Salem State Park features a dozen rough hewn log and timber houses, shops, a school and the Rutledge Tavern. The cooperage where Lincoln studied his law books is also preserved. Camping and hiking are available.

Surrounded by a wall of high trees, Kelso Hollow is located off Route 97 south of Petersburg. Performances for the play are scheduled nightly, except Monday, at 8 p.m. Admision is $4 for adults and $3 for children and senior citizens. For ticket information, call: (217) 632-7755. The play will be held through August 27th.

Tips for car trips with kids

Many children find a long trip in the car a restless, boring experience that can turn into fighting and arguing. Since such distractions not only spoil vacation traveling but can dangerously divert a driver's attention, the Chicago Motor Club-AAA has prepared the following guidelines to help vacationers cope with this problem.

Two important factors that must be dealt with when traveling with small children are: seeing to their safety and preventing them from becoming restless.

Child safety requires the following precautions when driving:

- Make sure that each child is properly fastened with a seat belt.
- Seat young children as far away from the driver as possible, preferably in the back seat.
- Forbid the children from playing with door handles and locks.
- Teach them never to stick their arms or legs outside an open window.
- Warn them about distracting the driver in any way.

One of the easiest ways to avoid children becoming restless is to plan your trip to include numerous rest stops. Not only will this help the kids let off steam, but it's relaxing for the driver as well.

Traveling with infants poses another set of safety problems. The National Safety Council recommends that all infants and toddlers ride in the back with toddlers safety-strapped and infants strapped in car seats or lying down in car beds. The rear window ledge should be kept clear of objects as a sudden stop can send them flying injuring the child.

Keeping children of all ages occupied and amused while traveling is another part of good planning.

In addition to several favorite toys or games, children should be supplied with a number of amusements. A new puzzle, riddle or book is good for older children, while interlocking blocks and construction toys can be found for varying ages. Coloring books and crayons are particularly effective in occupying the attention of smaller children.

But instead of loading your suitcase full of toys and games, you may just want to carry along some paper and pencils and occasionally play some travel games, such as finding the most states on license plates; counting cows, horses, etc.; or playing "categories," memory or rhyme games.

For babies the back seat can be converted into a padded play area. Two suitcases placed on the rear floor provide a base for a playpen pad. Pillows and a blanket make a safe and comfortable area.

Most infants do not become car sick. If the problem does occur an anti-nauseant may be useful and cutting out milk and selecting light meals may also help. The rhythm of the automobile wheels often induces sleep in quiet babies while active ones are entertained by the view moving past them.

Free guide for Wisconsin's history buffs

The revised "Traveler's Guide to Historic Wisconsin" is now available to all travelers and roamers interested in the Badger State's roots.

The free brochure lists state operated sites such as Villa Louis, Old Wade House, the Circus World Museum and Old World Wisconsin. Also listed are county and privately operated sites with such diverse names and topics as Hawk's Inn, the Rock River Thresheree, Chalet of the Golden Fleece and the Cook-Rutledge Mansion.

An outline map of Wisconsin is number and coordinate coded to allow for ease in geographically located attractions. The reverse side of the brochure lists, with brief descriptions, Wisconsin's 234 historical highway markers. Included in the popular markers are those recalling the creation of the Baraboo Range, the invention of the typewriter in Milwaukee and the birthplace of Flag Day near Waubeka. The highway markers are also identified on the state map.

This feline fanatic tells all

by Wandalyn Rice

Muriel Beadle is an unabashed cat lover who also loves research. That happy combination has resulted in her latest book, "The Cat: A Complete Authoritative Compendium of Information about Domestic Cats," (Simon and Schuster, $9.95).

Mrs. Beadle, a hearty woman who looks much younger than 62, (she was, the dust jacket of the book tells us, born in the "Year of the Cat" 1915) says she hopes that her two interests have provided something that her fellow cat lovers will find interesting.

"We've had lots of cats over the years and you observe what they do and you start to wonder why," she explains. The real inspiration for the book came when Cleo, a street cat who had been foraging around the Beadle's Hyde Park home, came to live. Cleo and Mary K, another feline, inevitably deferred at mealtimes to M'zelle, the senior cat in residence, but M'zelle let Cleo take over her favorite sleeping spot without a fight.

That curious sort of revolving dominance relationship sent Mrs. Beadle to the University of Chicago library to do a "simple research book." She says, "You look up every book on cats and you start reading them and those books lead to other things and eventually you might not know everything about cats, but you know a lot."

In writing the book, Mrs. Beadle, whose husband, George is a Nobel-prize winning geneticist, took a scientific approach. "The usual cat book has a chapter on cats in Egypt, some sections on sex and reproduction and is fleshed out by anecdotes about the author's own cats," she says. "I tried to keep my own cats out of it."

The result of her dedication to science is a book which answers such questions as whether cats are color-blind (they aren't, but they seem to regard color as irrelevant to their behavior) and describes the patterns of kittens' play in the light of recent scientific research.

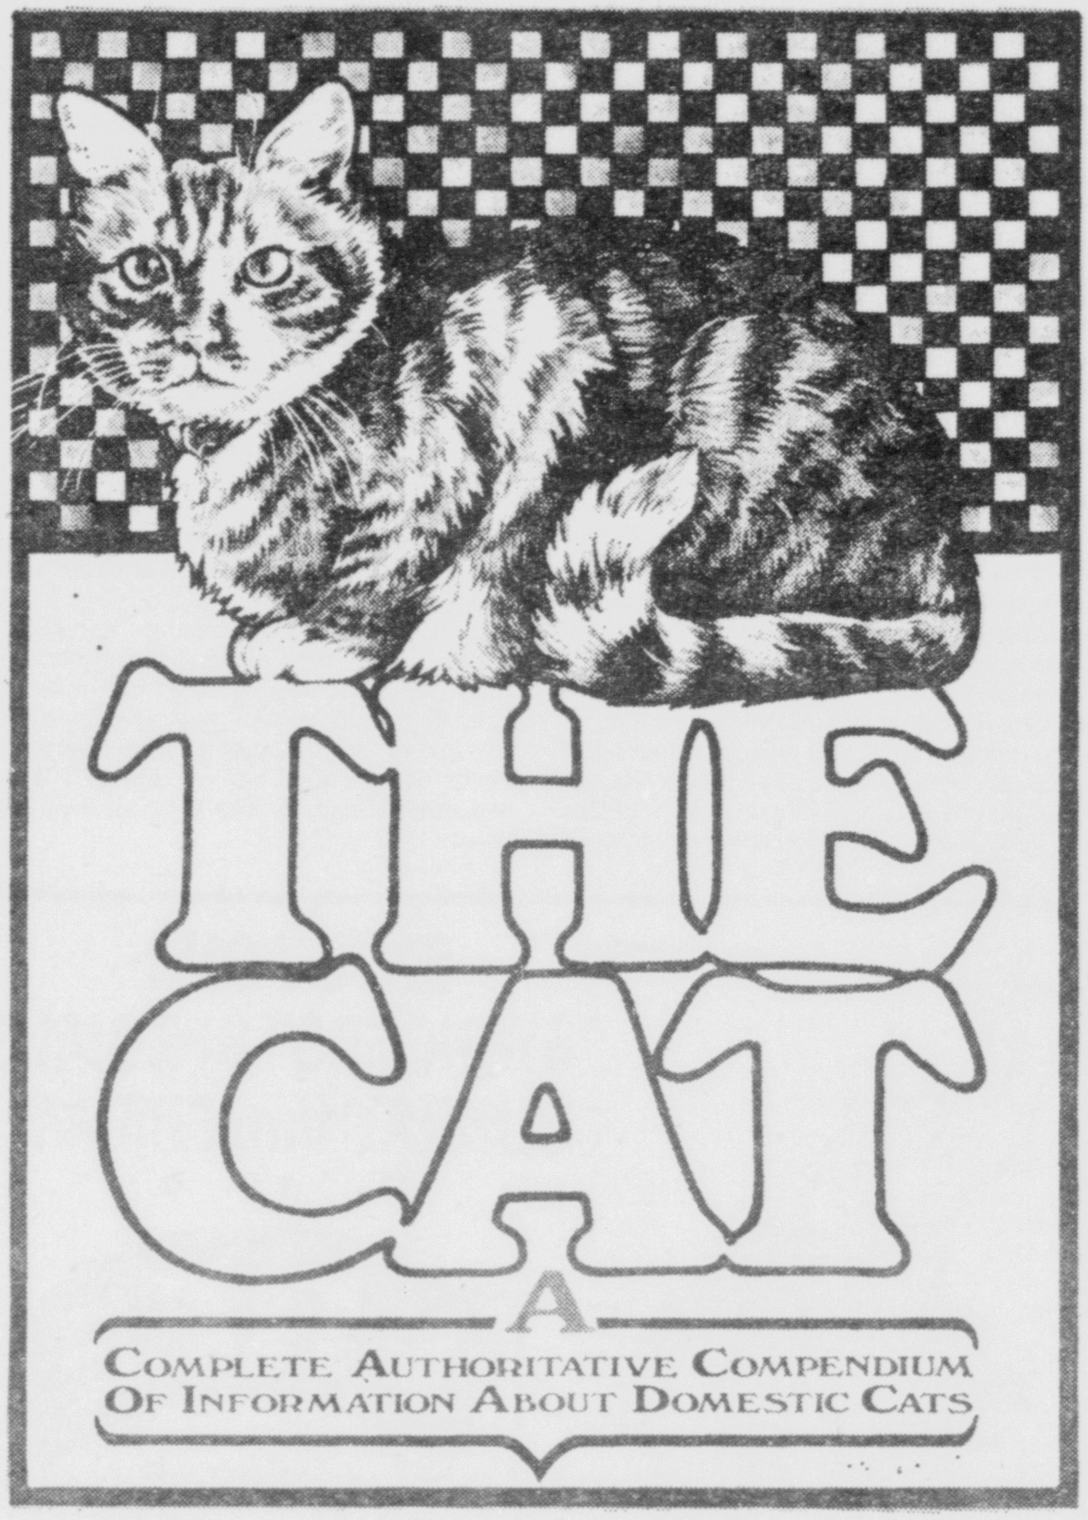

In addition, Mrs. Beadle describes the social structure cats operate in — unlike dogs and humans they don't naturally cluster in groups — and traces their changing fortunes throughout history. In the process, she made some interesting discoveries about the way humans relate to cats.

"I became very interested in the point where naturalists started to anthropomorphize cats," she says, to attribute human traits to them. "The older naturalists write about them very much as we do with observational data. In the 18th century, though, they moralize so. You don't see the perjorative statements about cats being aloof and independent until that time."

That discovery of the changing relationship between man and feline was one of several she made while writing the book. In addition, she says, she found "nobody has come up with any explanation of who domesticated cats and that's why I picked up the remark by (naturalist F.E.) Zeuner that cats domesticated themselves — and to me it seems perfectly in character."

Another discovery, which her contacts at

VIVIEN LEIGH, A Biography by Anne Edwards (Simon and Schuster, $8.95)

Reviewed by Pam Bigford

For those who know little more of Vivien Leigh than her immortal performance as Scarlett O'Hara, Anne Edwards' biography of the multifaceted actress is a fascinating revelation.

Incredibly beautiful, unusually bright and internationally famous by age 26 thanks to "Gone With The Wind," Leigh captured the heart and attention of the world and played the role of the star to the hilt.

But while Edwards keeps the reader riveted to the pages with Leigh's glamor and passion as well as the inevitable show biz gossip (Clark Gable's false teeth gave him bad breath), the book's major achievement is a tender, tortured portrait of Leigh's other side — the woman tormented by bouts with hysterical depression that kept her hovering on the edge of insanity.

Leigh's wit, beauty and natural kindness made her irresistible, even as a child when her convent school classmates more often than not named young Vivien as the person they would most like to be.

But her character was also marked by an exceptionally strong will. Just as she knew when she closed Margaret Mitchell's book that she would play Scarlett O'Hara (though producer David O. Selznick an ocean away had never heard of her), she knew from the moment she laid eyes on Laurence Olivier that she would eventually claim him as hers — in spite of their respective mates.

If Leigh alone had enchanted the public, pairing her with Olivier made them the unmatched golden couple. Passionately in love, they moved in the most glittering social circles, visited exotic, romantic spots and wrote torrid letters to each other when separated by their careers.

It was her adoration of Olivier, in fact, that compelled her to show up an hour, two hours early each day at the filming of "Gone With The Wind." By being punctual and working twelve to fourteen hours a day, Leigh hoped to hurry up the filming so she could get out of Hollywood and back to her lover. But it was Gable who reigned on the set, and he rarely worked more than a standard 8-hour day.

Gable, for all his star stature, is minimally mentioned in the book — except that to kill time on the set he taught Leigh backgammon and that after the first game she beat him every time. So in love with Olivier was Leigh that the King failed to arouse the slightest passion.

But it was during the couple's 20-year marriage that Vivien's manic depressive attacks began to appear. A physically frail person, Leigh developed tuberculosis but continued to drive herself to attain a stature equal to Olivier's in the theater.

Olivier, who was obviously deeply in love with Leigh but perhaps more in love with himself and his image, subtly diminished Leigh's professional accomplishments — even though he resented her Oscar displayed prominently on the mantel — by his unshakable insistence that true dramatic greatness could be achieved only by performing Shakespeare.

While Leigh's intensely loyal friends rallied without fail to her side during her often violent attacks, it was Olivier who eventually turned to another woman and divorced Leigh.

Her work became more and more of a salvation. Never showing the slightest glimpse of mental problems while performing, she made a number of important films, including her Oscar-winning performance as Blanche DuBois in "A Streetcar Named Desire," and did innumerable plays even though she often had to undergo shock treatments before coming to the theater.

Edwards, who must have become tolerant of tortured stars after having authored a biography of Judy Garland, tells Leigh's story credibly, leaving out none of the awful reality of her attacks, but with such compassion that it might have been Leigh herself describing her own agonizing attempts to maintain a normal life.

The book is a fascinating tale of a complex, intense woman who lived the brilliant parts of life to the fullest, and who endured the tragedies, like her beloved Scarlett, by clinging desperately to the hope that tomorrow will be a better day.

Soviet Union: Nothing to be gained by war

THE CLOUD OF DANGER: CURRENT REALITIES OF AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY by George F. Kennan (Atlantic-Little, Brown, $8.95).

Reviewed by Joseph C. Harsch

Anyone who has been alarmed by the recent talk of a revived danger of a Soviet-American war had better read what George Kennan has to say on the subject. Among experts on the Soviet Union and Soviet-American relations Kennan is the leading living authority. He believes there is a danger, yes; "the danger that the momentum of this tremendous and infinitely dangerous weapons race will get out of hand, will become wholly uncontrollable, and will, either through proliferation or by accident, carry us all to destruction."

But he contends, this is not because of any commitment by the Soviet leadership to the overthrow of the United States or of any Soviet plan for deliberate world domination.

This book is the most authoritative answer there can be to the current contention that the Kremlin is already committed to a war strategy and that the United States must at once embark on a massive weapons program to regain decisive military ascendancy.

Kennan is the last survivor of the triumvirate of experts on the Soviet Union who guided American policy on that subject through World War II and its aftermath. He is both son and grandson of Russian experts. He has spent some 15 years of his professional diplomatic career in and around the Soviet Union. He was the chief Soviet expert in State Department planning for longer than that.

What he has to say is that a lot of current American thinking and polemicizing on this subject is dangerously out of focus. There is much talk of "the present danger." It assumes an aggressive intent on the part of the Kremlin. Kennan notes that in the period which led up to World War I there came a point when German thinking settled into the assumption of an inevitable war with Russia.

According to Kennan, Bismarck pleaded in vain with the German leadership of the period to realize that "Germany had no objectives with regard to Russia that were worth the sacrifices of a war — that war would bring disaster to both parties." History records that it did. World War I was unmitigated disaster for both Imperial Russia and Imperial Germany. It also paved the way for Adolph Hilter and World War II.

And so it is today, says Kennan. "There is no political or ideological difference between the Soviet Union and the United States — nothing which either side would like, or would hope, to achieve at the expense of the other — that would be worth the risks and sacrifices of a military encounter."

The key question is whether the leadership in the Kremlin understands and accepts this. Kennan says "there is abundant evidence that the Soviet leadership as a whole does." That leadership, he contends, is "an old and aging group of men, commanding — but also very deeply involved with — a vast and highly stable bureaucracy" which cannot be "turned around and switched, in the course of a few days, from the normal governing of a country to the huge and wholly abnormal exertions of a major war."

Besides, the Kennan thesis goes, "there has never been a time since the aftermath of the recent war when the main concerns of the Soviet leadership have not been ones related to the internal problems that face them: first, the preservation of the security of their own rule within the country, and secondly, the development of the economic strength of the country which, although considerably greater than the United States in area and population, has only one half of the latter's gross national product."

The Kremlin's overseas problems include the harm the Chinese schism has done to Moscow's status as the center of the communist world. Kennan says this damages the Kremlin not only politically, but also militarily because it means that it could fall "between a communist world that had rejected it and a capitalist world that would not accept it."

George Kennan thinks that those who see a Soviet Union about to pounce on the United States are living in a fantasy world of their own concoction which ignores the realities of the Soviet condition. War, he thinks, would mean the end of the present regime in Moscow, hence is the last thing in the world they want. Their rearmament, he thinks, is due to fear and is defensive rather than offensive in character and intent.

On other matters, the Kennan book will have some surprises for conventional "liberals." He thinks it's time to let the West Europeans take over responsibility for such neighborhood problems as Cyprus, Greece, and Turkey. He wants Washington to concentrate its energies and efforts on what he considers the essential ailliance with Western Europe and with Japan. He accepts the American commitment to Israel — short of sending American troops. He favors a slow and cautious approach to mainland China. But the main immediate target should be the cooling of the danger of a nuclear war with the Soviet Union.

This is an important book. It is also extremely well written. Whether one agrees with Mr. Kennan's thinking, one must admire the clarity of his writing.

THE WORLD OF BEN LIGHTHART by Jaap ter Haar (Delacorte Press, $5.95, 10 to 14 years old)

Reviewed by Linda Punch

Ben Lighthart is like any other teenager whose world revolves around sports, friends and his impending entrance into high school. Then, Ben loses his sight in an accident and finds that things will never be the same.

In "The World of Ben Lighthart," author Jaap ter Haar depicts Ben's slow adjustment to his blindness. In the beginning, there is the pain and physical discomfort caused from the injury. Ben wakes after three fever-filled days to discover he will never see again. And for him, the worst part begins.

In the hospital, Ben is helped through his initial adjustment by Nurse Win, a woman whose face was disfigured by fire. Help also comes from his fellow patients, including a dying college student. From both, Ben learns to live with his handicap.

On leaving the hospital, Ben is once again filled with fear. While he feels comfortable among the patients and staff of the hospital, he is unsure about how he will be accepted by his family and friends. And most of all, he fears he will be sent to an institution for the blind.

Ben's parents struggle to help him back into the mainstream of living. He finds his room equipped with a typewriter and a machine to convert written material into braille. His mother struggles to help him catch up in his schoolwork while his father fights fruitlessly to allow him to be enrolled in high school.

Ben ultimately ends up entering an institution when his parents realize they cannot help him acquire the skills he'll need. But Ben loses his fear about the school for the blind when he realizes it is a place for him to start a new life, a temporary stopover on his way to self sufficiency.

Ter Haar is vivid in his descriptions of what life must be for a blind person — not only physically but emotionally. He also writes in a fast moving, readable style that most young readers should enjoy. The book is written for youngsters ages 10-14 years and most should find it interesting.

Getting along — one wife's tale of tragic illness

Reviewed by Linda Punch

When Limey Colman was felled by a stroke in the winter of 1975, neither he nor his wife realized the impact it would have on their lives.

Limey, described by his wife Hila as "complicated, rigid and uncompromising in many areas, simple in his tastes, highly intelligent and filled with knowledge both useful and esoteric, not an easy person but lovable and tender . . .," is reduced to a life severely limited by paralysis and loss of speech. Hila, a self-described "woman struggling to maintain her identity, her own independance, and at the same time wanting, needing, to make her man happy . . ." finds herself drawn into a world of pain and frustration as she watches her husband's condition deteriorate.

Their struggle during the last year of Limey's life is chronicled in Hila Colman's book "Hanging On." In it, she describes her painful efforts to save not only her husband's life but their life together.

Mrs. Colman traces Limey's journey through two rehabilitation centers and his final year at home. During that time, she must confront not only the misery of his illness but also the reality of the high cost of medical care in the United States. She watches in frustration as her bank account dwindles and agency after agency denies responsibility for her husband's care. Several times, she is told to divorce her husband so he can apply for welfare payments.

Most painful of all is her struggle to maintain a life outside the boundaries of her husband's illness. She is continually frustrated in her efforts to keep her husband interested in the present. Trapped in the misery of his illness, he finds solace only in things of the past.

Mrs. Colman says her story is not one of heroic self sacrifice. "Limey's life was dear to me and had meaning. He was alive, and that hospital room was the center of my existence. I needed Limey in my way as much as he needed me, and he needed me in a tremendous way. He needed me in a way that no one, not he, not our children, had ever needed me before, and that knowledge had its own headiness. I'm not talking about feeling saintly, God forbid, or martyr-like, but rather as if everything I ever had to give to someone was being used, that I was being tapped to my innermost depth, I was hitting on all cylinders at high speed."

Mrs. Colman is not present when Limey dies. Her last memory of him is his body propped up in the hospital bed "his head to one side, looking like a wounded bird . . . I knew that his face as I saw it then, no different from what it had been the day before, would be with me for the rest of my life. I did not say goodbye."

Mrs. Colman offers no simple solutions in her book and she admits she would have done many things differently. Yet, her book will offer comfort and practical advice on costs and red tape to others faced with a tragic illness.

the University of Chicago helped with, was tracing the cat constellation put in the sky by French astronomer Joseph Lelande in the late 18th century. Her search began with a reference in a book to "the cat Lelande put in the sky."

"I called a friend in the University of Chicago astronomy department and asked him if he had ever heard of it," she says. "He hadn't, but he wrote to the Paris observatory and the head of the observatory put his people to work going through their archives until they found it."

"The Cat" is Mrs. Beadle's seventh book, joining a book she and her husband wrote for laymen on DNA, two volumes of memoirs, the case history of a surgical operation, and a book on children's mental development. Her next book, she says, is tentatively titled "60 going on 70" and will deal with the problems people face at that period of their lives.

Just as "The Cat" is not her last book, it has not ended her love affair with felines. Her oldest cat and inspiration, M'zelle, recently died at age 18. She says, with a wistful look, "That cat was the one I really loved — I grieved for her almost as though she was a person."

But the sadness passes quickly and Mrs. Beadle adds, "When our next oldest cat goes to meet her maker — and that will probably be soon because she's 17 — we'll find a peppy little tabby kitten and off we'll go again."

All of which merely confirms what Mrs. Beadle wrote at the end of "The Cat": "Cats do fit beautifully into the human lap."

THE GREEN THUMB DIRECTORY by Marion Schroeder (Dolphin/Doubleday, $3.95)

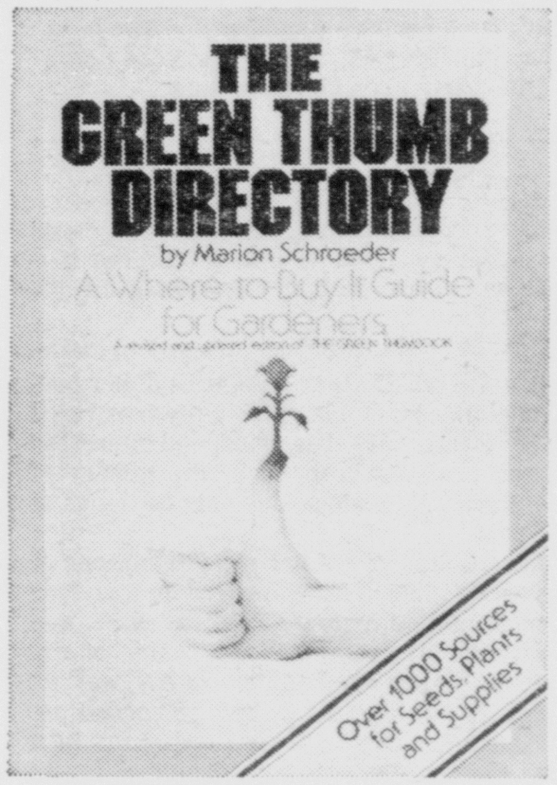

Reviewed by Mary B. Good

"The Green Thumb Directory" could put a garden columnist out of business! Or rather, it could drastically reduce inquiries garden writers get concerning where to find hard-to-find garden items.

The gardening boom has produced a growing frustration on the part of plant-lovers: Many people don't know where to go for seeds, plants, and garden supplies that they can't get locally.

Have you ever looked in vain, for example, for another night-blooming cereus after yours croaked in the morning?

Maybe you wanted, and couldn't hunt up, a book on plant breeding, or a guide to pronouncing plant names so you don't trip over a botanical tongue-twister.

Are you an allergy-sufferer who could use a pollen mask when the ragweed blows up your nose while you are in the pumpkin patch?

Perhaps you want to buy a white bird-of-paradise, an Oriental persimmon, a dye plant, a baobab tree, a couple of lichens, an outdoor cactus, seeds of blonde lettuce, black walnut starters, or cayenne pepper from French Guinea? You might even contact a plant-finding service list in Marion Schroeder's "The Green Thumb Directory" and let them look for whatever you can't find.

Do you need a hard-to-find tool, beekeeping equipment, weather instruments, water gardening or light growing supplies, a time-lapse device for taking flower photos, a flasking kit. bonsai pottery, a tico tunnel, shading cloth, or a skin response meter for checking plant reactions to noise?

"The Green Thumb Directory" has within its pages names, addresses, and phone numbers of seed and plant growers galore — including someone who sells nothing but beans, another who specializes in orchids that do not require greenhouse culture, and an outfit that sells plants with curious shapes.

The book lists plant societies, and places where travelers can visit gardens of interest.

The author has avoided a tedious listing by sprinkling curious facts and helpful hints throughout the book — like how to roast peanuts, or using prickly pear cactus nodals on pizza, or curing athlete's feet with onion juice.

A book like this couldn't possibly cover every conceivable source on where to buy garden-related items. But it does include those of most interest and help to all gardeners, beginners and specialists alike. The majority are mail-order firms, small and large — a supplement to any reader's primary sources like the local nursery, garden center, greenhouse. And Mrs. Schroeder, of Cary, Ill. has done a first-rate job of ferreting out the information.

When her initial efforts at compiling garden buying guides first appeared on the scene in 1974 and 1975, she published the two slim editions herself. I couldn't help but speculate at the time I got my hot hands on them, as to why her valuable info wasn't picked up by a major publisher. Lucky for gardeners that Mrs. Schroeder is in the Dolphin Books stable now, a division of Doubleday, with a volume double in size and a shot at a wider circulation.

Sure, the book has to be revised periodically, but so does the telephone book, and this is a Yellow Pages of gardening.

Hunt out a copy of "The Green Thumb Directory" — don't wait until they make a movie out of it.

Summer brings new harvest of short stories

PRIZE STORIES 1977: THE O. HENRY AWARDS edited by William Abrahams (Coubleday and Co., $8.95).
ALL OUR SECRETS ARE THE SAME: NEW FICTION FROM ESQUIRE, edited by Gordon LIsh (W. W. Norton and Co., $5.95).
WINTER'S TALES 22 edited by James Wright (St. Martin's Press, $8.95).

Reviewed by Nancy Gail Reed

One starts out shouting, "Applause, applause!" for this year's number one annual American anthology of short stories, the O. Henry collection. For, to start off, there is Ella Leffland's eerie brinkmanship in "Last Courtesies."

The setting is a foggy San Francisco, it once glorious Victorian homes fast going to seedy flats and under-the-stairs, behind-the-alley violence. Spinster Lillian is as toggy as the Bay air concerning her own proper behavior. She is "too polite," as Vladimir, the immigrant piano tuner, continues to tell her. Lillian's failure to perceive character, to know when to open the doors to her world, and when not to, makes her a victim, in the end, of the very violence she has tried so hard to avoid and ignore.

"Last Courtesies" is a flawless story, one in which the difficult task of how to continue in the main character's point of view, even as that point of view wends its way toward unconsciousness is expertly accomplished. A reader ends this story breathless, admiring.

But a subtle waft of disappointment scents the air soon after the second (joint) first-prize tale, Shirley Hazzard's "A Long Short Story," gets under way. Well enough executed, it is no match for Leffland's entry, and hints at what is wrong with the rest of the collection: over-used themes, super-intense intellectualism, and a tendency merely to repeat the birth-to-death cycle.

The O. Henry collection is supposed to represent the very best in American short stories. Last year, it did. I agree that, in the collection's unoriginal terms, as stated on the book jacket, "The short story is alive and well!" Only, those counting on the O. Henry's this year for proof of the life and well-being of the short story will be a little disappointed.

Elsewhere, in "All Our Secrets Are the Same," short-story devotees will find a number of familiar favorites. Many of the stories (Cynthia Ozick's "Usurpation: Other People's Stories" and "Bloodshed," Gail Godwin's "False Lights," Raymond Carver's "Collectors," Milan Kundera's "Let the Old Dead Make Room for the Young Dead," to name a few) have been in collections elsewhere.

William Kotzwinkle's "Horse Badorties Goes Out" is an almost-nostalgic trip into the near-past of hippiedom. Because of its mindless orientation, this was a little-recorded era. Vague Horse with his dirty pad and his frequent "Man!"s have to evoke chuckles from those who remember, and it's heartening to find that Gordon Lish has chosen to permanently ensconce Horse in the short-story annals.

Still another anthology to look into, to read well-spaced, with fresh air required in between takes, is the British collection, "Winter's Tales." All but one of the seven contributors happen to be women. James Wright's editorial note says, "This time the ladies have won handsomely in fair competition," and he thus bears testimony to something I have been noticing in short story publications for the past two years. Women are writing more, and better, fiction than ever before. Where, earlier, entries from women meant an inevitable woman's point of view — the woman as main character, the woman and her douleurs as main subject matter, the woman against man, against woman, against everything — the new, healthier evidence is that there is a trend away from "women writers," and merely toward writers. Where male writers were creating real women a long time ago (Emma Bovary, Anna Karenina, Daisy Buchanan), women writers seemed to be avoiding the task of creating a real man. No more. "Winter's Tales" is full of real men. And a good deal of them created by women.

Nasty crimes, high suspense on the Thames

BLOCKBUSTER by Stephen Barclay (William Morrow and Co., Inc. $8.95)

Reviewed by Cathy Collison

'Blockbuster' is an apt name for a novel concerning the Bank of England, Scotland Yard and a master-mind extortionist.

The wreck of the Richard Montgomery, a World War II liberty ship, is a dangerous nuisance in the Thames River. Its unexploded bomb and ammunition cargo could cause the "largest non-nuclear explosion" on record. The ministry deems salvaging the wreck too risky. But someone risks his life to place a remote control bomb device on the ship, and then demands a million pounds from the Bank of England.

"My name is John Cutter-Smith. I must talk to the Prime Minister immediately."

"Could you tell me what it's all about, please?"

"Naturally. If I cannot talk to the PM, you'll have to act or take the responsibility. I have demanded a million pounds from the Bank of England or else a remote-controlled bomb will explode the Richard Montgomery wreck at Sheerness. The likely consequences are probably known to you, but full details are in the letters which I left at the Bank and which, I suspect are not getting due attention. I strongly advise you to follow up without delay. Good-bye."

Without delay, Bucken of Scotland Yard is called back to London to aid in the hunt for "The Principal" as his sidekick Cutter-Smith calls him.

Bucken at first resents the call back to London. It takes him away from investigation of an immigration racket and the slaying of his partner. Soon some odd links surface between the immigration case and the extortion plot. Someone in the Yard is involved deeply in nasty crimes. Bucken faces the ugly truth that it's someone very close to him.

"Somebody had squealed. And that somebody had to be high up, in the stratosphere of the Metropolitan Police where alone Bucken's plans and Hunt's whereabouts would be known. A nark in the Yard. A traitor. He wished he could cry."

Such a leak makes tracing the "Principal" near impossible. For someone always keeps one step ahead of Bucken.

Stephen Barclay writes for serious mystery readers — ones that won't stand for any pat formulas or easy answers. This mystery is one worth rereading immediately to catch the subtle intricacies baffling Bucken and the reader. Likewise, Barclay's training as a journalist benefits the novel. He does not skimp on details, from description of Cutter-Smith to the construction of the sunken World War II liberty ship.

"The well-groomed little fellow with the pointed beard. Standard lunatic — even familiar. Not poor, quite obviously not, judging from the well-cut medium gray suit, but probably somewhat feeble with that reverential manner toward the towering top-hatted gatekeeper in pink tails."

Cutter-Smith is no master criminal. Yet Bucken dares not confront his close friend and assistant commissioner, Rattray, about his suspicions. For Rattray quite clearly has placed position as more important than friendship. Nothing short of proof will make Bucken tell his fears. When the gentle hot-dog seller and informant "The Professor" is found dead, Bucken no longer needs much to convince him that more than one person is involved.

Endless chases and slayings continue to plague Bucken as the novel keeps a fast pace. Barclay's ironic twist to the mystery's conclusion polishes off a superb suspense story.

Author Stephen Barclay escaped to England at the end of the Hungarian uprising in 1956. He has written several radio and TV plays, as well as the recent documentary report on "The Search for Air Safety."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone you thought would never outgrow you, has. Ari. Admit it, accept it, and then forget it. If you are stubbornly intent on keeping hold of this "dead wire," you may be missing out on a solid new connection. Week ends with a "sizzle."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What was promised yesterday is being programmed for today, Taurus. And believe it or not, YOU are the main event. Everybody is a star, but this is ridiculous. You are feted, fawned over and festooned. Your cup bubbleth over. On last day of week, you have an "aviance" night.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You make every decision with the imperative "me, we and they," Gem. This week all the angles you have been figuring come together to form a big maze. As you scurry about making your round-about way to the finish, someone else may be beating you with a straight shot. On last day, you find a little honey catches more than flies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are a "slow-study," Moonbaby! Picky, picky, picky. A grasp of the essentials is all you need now, leave the details until later. A complete vision of what you can accomplish will come to you this week. There really isn't any time for play, but on last day allow yourself one little fantasy . . . running barefoot in the dew, perhaps?!

LEO (July 23-August 22): You taste of many things, Leo, but really do not take the time to savor any of them. New car, new friends, new places to visit . . . set all that aside for week of quiet contemplation. Within the familiar and commonplace, new worlds await to be studied. On last day, you will be back in THIS world tasting everything with the fervor of a junk-food junkie. DON'T GORGE!

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Health problems descend on you like the black plague, Virg. Cease and desist from ALL frivolities . . . "get thee to a nunnery" if necessary. Go any place where you can have complete "R & R," and THAT means rest and recuperation (in case you've forgotten).

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): A twelve o'clock scholar tries to put a dunce cap on you Lib, but you get the point across. Taking time to explain fully what you mean will reveal your wisdom to others. One who thinks they can walk on water may be all wet. Week ends with a "glug"!

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): You have an inferiority complex that is turning into a runaway rash, Scorp. Don't compare yourself with others, they're not worried. A quick list of all your accomplishments posted in a visible spot, say, the bathroom mirror, will serve to remind you how REALLY SUPER you are. Fight last day "dullies" with something spicey and icey.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): A Busby Berkeley Review would be lost in the crowd in your living room, Saj. Your naturally generous and expansive "open-door" policy has left you darn little space to maneuver in. Suggest that everyone adjorn to the nearest ball park. If that doesn't work, put a lock on your refrigerator door, throw the main switch in your fuse box and leave for Australia.

CAPRICORN (December 22-Jaunary 19): There's no use emptying your pockets, Cap, you won't find anything in them but holes. Money gets away from you as easily as water gets through a sieve. Put glue on your fingers and blinders over your eyes. You have to say "no" to everything. On last day splurge. Buy yourself a basic necessity!

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Everything is on dead center for you, Aquari. The lull is dull, but use the time to tidy up. Excess baggage should be jettisoned. What has looked like a complicated relocation will turn out to be a happy change. Youthful enthusiasm gives you boost on last day.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): Something you thought could not end is over, Pisces. There's no use looking back and NO TIME. A new cycle is beginning for you which will give you additional strength. Your vanities are less than you imagine . . . your virtues, greater. Someone who is quiet loves you.

A new era in world chess may be in the offing, if Svetozar Gligoric's candidacy for president of the World Chess Federation (FIDE) is successful.

The Yugoslav grandmaster proposes on election to make a match between Bobby Fischer and World Champion Anatoly Karpov his number-one project! Since the universally respected chessplayer-journalist is a close friend of Fischer, his campaign promise is causing a flutter in the chess world.

Gligoric, who calls for a major effort by FIDE to popularize chess in Africa, Asia, and Latin America, has also demanded the expulsion of South Africa from the federation. He says that its membership is an implicit support for apartheid and is "incompatible with the spirit" of FIDE.

Stamp notes

Fifty years ago, the friendly bond between the United States and Canada was cemented with the opening of the Peace bridge linking Fort Erie, Ontario with Buffalo, New York. On Aug. 4, the two countries will each launch a commemorative stamp marking that event.

The Canadian adhesive is a 12-cent stamp depicting the sweeping lines of the bridge structure adorned with the three flags symbolizing more than 150 years of peace between the two nations: the Canadian Maple Leaf, the United States Stars and Stripes, and the flag of the United Nations.

Designed by Rolf Harder of Montreal, the adhesive will be printed in four-color lithography by Ashton-Potter, Ltd. of Toronto. Marginal inscriptions, including the designer's name, will appear in the top margin facing in and in the bottom margin facing out. The total print order is fourteen million stamps, 50 to a pane, and all will bear general tagging.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send self-addressed envelopes to "FDC/Peace Bridge Stamp, Philatelic Service, Canada Post, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada K1A OB 5" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed plus a 15-cent service fee for each cover affixed with less than 50-cents postage. Your remittance must be by international bank draft payable to "The Receiver General for Canada."

Details on the United States Peace Bridge stamp will appear next week.

The Northwest Stamp Club will feature a swap night at its next meeting, 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 11 at the Arlington Heights Public Library, 500 N. Dunton Street. Visitors are invited.

The U.S. Postal Service reports that about 90 percent of the Colorado Centennial stamps were perforated on the L-Perforator at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the perforations run through the selvage. An additional fifteen million Coloardo stamps were perforated on-press and those perforations stop short of the edge of the selvage; the majority of these stamps will be distributed to post offices and the remainder will be available from the Philatelic Sales Division.

The U.S. Postal Service has announced plans to initiate a Black Heritage USA series of commemorative stamps to recognize the contributions of black Americans to the growth and development of this country. The series will begin in 1978 with an adhesive honoring Harriet Tubman, who was instrumental in the operation of the "underground railroad." In 1979, a stamp will honor Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., civil rights leader and winner of the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize.

The Americanization of Jean Marsh

by Vernon Scott

Jean Marsh captivated viewers as the starchy Rose Buck of the award winning English television series, "Upstairs, Downstairs," (the last 16 episodes of which WTTW, Channel 11, will rerun in September), but few remember Jean for the American roles she has played.

Born a cockney, the Americanization of Marsh has been going on for many years.

Like many an English lass born within the sound of Bow Bells, Jean has mastered dialect of every kind — from Mayfair aristocrat to American midwest.

This talent served her well 18 years ago when she moved to Manhattan to work in the American theater and television shows during New York's golden electronic age of live video drama.

"I played American roles in shows like 'Playhouse 90' and some of the others," said Jean.

"And no one had an inkling that I was English.

"I spent two and a half years in the United States. In the end I decided you can't really establish an acting career in a foreign country.

"You have to make it in your own country first. If not, it looks as if you can't get work in your homeland."

Jean packed up and left the colonies in 1960, not to return until three years ago to promote "Upstairs, Downstairs."

Jean is altogether unlike the veddy proper British maid she played in the series. She is a warm, talkative woman with a twinkle in her eye. She is attractive to men and admits to having had dalliances on both sides of the Atlantic.

Not only did Jean star in "Upstairs, Downstairs," she wrote the continuing story of the highly successful series. In all, there were 68 episodes. There were four series of 13 segments each and another series of 16.

"I wouldn't write for my own character again," she said thoughtfully. "It's difficult to do, especially if you're really fond of the rest of the cast.

"Every actor in a large cast fights for more lines and distinctive action. Naturally, they look to the writer to supply both. I don't like fighting and I was embarrassed by being both writer and actress.

"So I ended up by writing fewer lines for my role as Rose than I did for the rest of the characters in the story."

Curiously, Jean's extraordinary performance in the series wasn't as well received in England as in the United States. Once the emmys took heed of her, however, the British joined in the accolades.

After completing the last of "Upstairs, Downstairs" a year and a half ago, Jean returned to this country to star on stage for three months in "Habeas Corpus."

"Wages aren't what they could be in England," she said. "And while I was in 'Habeas Corpus' I earned enough money so that for the first time in my life I was able to stay in a first class hotel.

"But money has never been my first consideration when it comes to accepting parts. I tend to do the work that appeals to me regardless of the pay. Perhaps that's unrealistic economically. But that's the way I like it.

"I've been here in Hollywood since last November doing two plays at the Los Angeles Music Center — 'The Importance of Being Ernest' and 'Travesties.' I play the character of Gwendolyn in both.

"My take home pay is $140 a week. But I made a lot of money playing in 'My Fat Friend' on stage in Canada, so I can afford to enjoy working in two really great plays.

Jean currently can be seen costarring with Michael Caine and Donald Sutherland in "The Eagle Has Landed," her first film assignment in several years.

"It was difficult to decide whether to do the part," she said. "I read the book and found it very exciting. The fact that they paid me a great deal of money probably had something to do with my decision for a change.

"What's more, it meant working for six weeks only a few miles from where I live in Oxfordshire.

"After all these years as a working actress, I do have to worry financially. I keep busy for economic reasons.

"I turn down many parts that pay well because I feel they are wrong for me. Rather than work in something inferior in films or television, I have a lecture and poetry recital I can do if I want to earn money."

Not only did Jean Marsh star in "Upstairs; Downstairs," she wrote the successful series.

Julie Harris

I would like to know the name of the movie that involves a girl, a winding staircase, a garden of statues and a mansion. My family says it's "The House of the Haunted Hill," starring Vincent Price and James MacArthur. My mother disagrees. Who is right? G.T.

Mother knows best. But the rest of you are not far wrong. You're thinking of "The Haunting," starring Julie Harris, Claire Bloom, Richard Johnson and Russ Tamblyn.

Please tell me a little about Donny Most of "Happy Days." C.S.

It's the least one could do for Most, who stars as Ralph Malph, friend of the Fonz. As a child Donny saw the motion picture "The Al Jolson Story," which kindled his early interest in acting. He entered the entertainment field at the age of 15, singing and dancing with a specialty review featuring youngsters on the Catskills borscht circuit in New York. There he was discovered by a New York agent who saw his potential as an actor. Deciding to take acting seriously, he studied his craft with a drama coach, and soon started to appear in commercials.

Donny Most

Following graduation from Erasmus Hall High School in Brooklyn (his home borough), he enrolled at Lehigh University at Bethlehem, Pa. with plans of continuing his studies at UCLA.

Is Richard Dawson, the host of "Family Feud," the same Richard Dawson who played on "Hogan's Heroes?" Whether he is or not, I like him (them) just the same. A.C.

Richard Dawson

The sticky-fingered Newkirk of "Hogan's Heroes" and the man in the middle of the "Family Feud" are one and the same Richard Dawson, who will be glad to know that you like both of him.
